POLITICAL NOTES.

—The Democrats here abouts, consider the Watchman a very much better Democratic paper after the election than before. How is it Gray?

—And now Ben. Butler threatens to form a new party in Massachusetts.—N. Y. Times

Why, how's this? We understood he contemplated going to Portugal to start up a spoon factory.

—The Democracy tremblingly extends its hand and kindly invites us to come over and join its ranks. We appreciate your generosity gentlemen, but beg leave to very respectfully decline.

—What a great spread and hurrah the Democracy does make over its little victory. It reminds one of the enthusiasm displayed by a ten-year-old school boy over his first pair of high-topped boots.

—Already those Democrats elected to Congress at the late election, have began to talk about remodeling their houses, putting up French roofs, tarred walks, etc. How naturally they smell plunder.

—The Pittsburg Post is already chuckling over the idea that Fernando Wood can be elected Speaker of the next House of Representatives. It is rather early to begin, but it is all right. We hope these happy Democrats will take all the rope they want.

—Since the late Democratic victory, we are continually hearing reports from all parts of the state, of drunken brawls and free street-fights, which is another indication of the glorious state of affairs that would prevail, were the Democracy allowed to gain full power.

—It is fortunate for the country that this political tornado was not delayed until 1876. It could not have happened at a more opportune time. The Democrats have won enough to make them show their hands, but not enough to enable them to do much mischief.

—Here is the latest on the election:

"The Democrats are now in glee,
And think Republicanism carried to sea;
They fuss and cackle like a settin' hen,
And crack huge jokes on Cock Eye Ben.

Sherman they tackle with cutting words,
And illustrate their papers with all sorts of birds;
They declare Mobilierism drove from sight,
And Grant's Third Term knocked higher'n a kite.

—Hon. W. A. Wallace is the Pennsylvania Rail Road Company's Candidate for United States Senator. This move of course, is with an eye single, to have the United States furnish the funds to make the Texas Pasific Railroad of which Mr. Wallace is Vice President.

—The Democracy throughout the state with one accord, exclaims, "The Republican camp-fires have at last been squelched, and not so much as a flicker is left." No, not dead; the spark liveth, and by vigorous fanning may yet blaze again, and in a way that shall severely scorch your slanderous tongues.

—It is understood and being advocated by some Democratic officials, one at least, that Register Morrison's services as chairman of the Democratic County Committee, should be rewarded by an election to a Third Term.

We thought it rather strange that the Captain did not object to General Grant being elected to a third term. But straws always show, &c.

—Has anybody read anywhere anything about any "Southern outrage" since the election? We haven't, and we can't find one, and we're almost famished for a Southern outrage to read.—Watchman.

Why, good gracious, yes; one day last week a colored gentleman of Richmond, Va., was kicked clean down a flight of stairs for accidentally spitting on a man's boots. The "freebooter" was a Democrat, of course. This, remember, is only one instance, and several states yet to hear from.

—Now since the Democrats have achieved a victory, we suppose, according to their own words, times will be better and easier hereafter. Among other things, we suppose eggs will be more plenty and larger than heretofore; triple yoke, double story four pounders, with a small sized chicken attached will be looked for. About three yards will be taken from ladies' trains, boots will be worn large enough to accommodate several bunions, and other miracles equally wonderful will no doubt be wrought.

RETROSPECTION.

Two weeks have passed away since the election, the smoke of the battle has cleared away and we are able to see that the worst fears of the most timid Republicans are fully realized.

Kansas, Wisconsin, Maine, Rhode Island, Vermont, South Carolina and Iowa, are the only green spots left, and with the exception of little Rhodie, which is always true, have in the past year, suffered somewhat with Democratic misrule. A trial of one year was sufficient to cure them, as it seems they do not wish to try the experiment for two years in succession. This will be the case with those states which have now gone against us. Our terrible defeat could not have come in a more opportune time. Had this whirlwind come two years later it would have lost us everything, and would have been a terrible misfortune to the country. We notice that some of our Republican exchanges seem to be very despondent; as though this furious storm had swept old landmarks away which never can be replaced, and the end of the great Republican party was at hand. We have no fears of such a result. Our principles are right—are from God himself, and the right though crushed to earth, shall rise again. The people have not repudiated these principles, although they have repudiated some of the corrupt men who had obtained influence with the organization, and were using it to further their own corrupt ends. The result of this election will be to lay many a man, who is dangerous to our party, on the shelf. Such men as Butler of Mass., and Harry White of this state. The one of giant intellect, but corrupt as the devil himself; the other a gigantic fop and fraud. Both are at war with the press and in favor of any legislation that would curtail its usefulness, because they fear its independence and power to expose to the clear light of day their corrupt doings.

Our party has been loaded down with such kind of lumber until the burden has become too heavy to bear, and in districts where such men, by wire pulling, were able to secure the nomination we consider their defeat a public blessing, and the salvation of our party. But this evil as great as it had become was not alone the cause of our wide spread disaster, although the evil legislation eminating from them caused many a thinking man to turn aside from the principles that he loved so well to vote for a change of men, feeling at the time, as though he might be "jumping from the frying pan into the fire." Yet there were others of a different class who made the Republican party responsible for the panic, and voted accordingly. They did not stop to inquire whether the party was really responsible for their trouble or not. Men in their condition seldom do. Eighty thousand men out of employment in New York, with a long dreary winter staring them in the face, are very susceptable material for unscrupulous and crafty politicians to work upon. The third term hoax added to the general discontent, although no sensible man, who would stop to think upon the subject, would give it any importance. Yet it had its weight with the multitude, and then to help the joke along our "silent head" which was fitly represented by a New York illustrated paper, by a clam with a lighted cigar stuck between the closed shells, treated the matter with high disdain, and refused to answer impertinent questions.

Our military president who understands war better than finance, did not refuse to talk or write upon money matters, and advance the most foolish theories, visionary in the extreme. Here was another cause of the trouble.

Russel Erret, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, and one of the best posted and observant politicians in Pennsylvania, says in an editorial in the Pittsburg Commercial:

"The national administration can take to itself whatever credit or blame there is for the reaction which has set in against it throughout the country. If, when the panic occurred in 1873, the National Government had stepped into the relief and support of the mercantile and manufacturing community, instead of starting out on an irrational cruise to force a return to specie payments in the very teeth of a heavy and general commercial depression, there would have been none of the consequent distress, and no cause for reaction. Congress would cheerfully have followed and upheld the President in any action then taken to prevent or mitigate the panic, and the country would now be on the road to a resumption of its old prosperity, instead of lagging and dragging along as it now is. The want of harmony between the President and Congress on the financial question is one of the causes of this revolution. Congress represented the people and was willing to aid in relieving them, but the President's resistance to it was an insuperable obstacle, and the result is seen in the election of a Democratic House of Representatives. No administration can succeed in maintaining a policy, financial or otherwise, against the will and the wishes of the people. This the present administration has attempted to do, and it is welcome to whatever gratification it can draw from the result."

We have heard it stated that the President does not consider the late rebuke as intended for him, but that Congress is all to blame. We cannot believe the President to be so deluded. Certain it is that as far as Pennsylvania is concerned, the financial policy of Grant has given great dissatisfaction, and many of his appointments have disgusted his best friends. For him to assume then, that the people only intended to rebuke the Congress would be folly indeed. We hope that the President and Congress will learn a lesson from this defeat, and so shape their course as to produce harmony in our ranks, and bring prosperity to our people. Then shall our defeat be turned into a blessing, and our party made stronger for the great Presidential contest yet to come. The Democrats who have had no settled policy will now have to adopt one. It is extremely easy to find fault and tear down, but it is extremely difficult to propose new plans and to build up. A financial policy which will please every section of the country, will be as much of a puzzle to the Democratic leaders as it is to the Republicans. Much beneficence was to be the result of a change, but we fail to see how the Democratic party is going to revive business by inaugurating free trade, which is what the Democratic papers tell us this victory means.

The New York Evening Post (Republican) says: We do not regard yesterday's result as expressing popular opinion on a conflict concerning any of these three subjects, of which we heard so much during the canvass—hard money, free trade, and "home rule." We do not believe that if the Democratic and Republican platforms had been identical as to all three of these questions, as they were very nearly, in respect to the financial question, this morning's returns would have read very differently. What then does the defeat mean?

We have called yesterday a Republican defeat. It would be a great mistake to call it a Democratic victory. The Democrats, as a national party, offered the people only one thing. They had no policy to submit. They had no record on which they could ask the people to trust them. They had no carefully matured or coherent measures for the future better than or materially different from Republican measures. They did offer one thing—a change. The people took the change; they did not take the Democrats. Whether they will take them remains an open question. Upon a change the people are resolved. If the Republican party have the wisdom and courage to perfect the change, that party will still be the strongest in the country. If it have not the people will try the Democratic party—not with much hope, indeed; but they will try it. Let not the Democrats then, declude themselves into the belief that they have gained a Democratic victory. The Republican defeat is simply their opportunity. The people have used them as an instrument to chastise the Republicans. Whether the instrument shall prove further useful or shall be cast aside the next two years will show. The New York Evening Mail (Republican) views the matter in this light: We are free to admit that the Republican party has been accumulating burdens that would long since have crushed any less vigorous organization. One of the heaviest of them was dumped off upon the rocks of Cape Ann yesterday. A party that has had vigor enough to get along with Butler "to the fore" will find its recovery from reverses very much facilitated by the loss of its "Old Man of the Sea." We notice too, that the party is the lighter for having dropped several other "Backpayers" in various States, and still other Congressmen who have been more conspicuous for their capacity for jobs than for anything else. Of course, the "Tidal Wave" that has carried away this sort of rotten "floodwood" has also taken some excellent material, but they had no business to be caught out in such a bad year for Republicans.

——We understand that a new Democratic paper is to be started in Bellefonte about the first of January. It is to be a joint stock concern and will be managed by a board of directors. The capital stock will be $10,000 and nobody will be allowed to become a stock holder who is not now or will not be a candidate for office. The editors will be legion and mostly chosen from the legal profession. Messrs Smith Barnhart, Capt. J. H. Morrison, Adam Hoy, Esq., and Foote of the Berichter will, we understand, be the principal editors. We are pleased to make the announcement of this new Democratic paper. We hardly thought the "Watchman, the Centre Hall "Reporter" and the "Berichter" were able successfully to do battle with the REPUBLICAN and we'd be glad to see the opposition take on more supplies so as to even the thing up as it were. Four against one will odds against us only as to number. We hope the "True Democrat will continue to issue and then there'll be five brilliants in the Democratic constellation. In the language of Fitz James:

"Come one, come all; this rock shall fly
From its firm base as soon as I."

—The is no doubt but the Hon. Warren J. Woodward will feel very much indebted to the "Watchman" for the elaborate article which appeared in that paper the week before the election, advocating his election for Supreme Judge. In its zeal in behalf of Judge Woodward, the "Watchman" entirely overlooked the merits of an other Judicial Candidate nearer home. We consider it excusable.

——Hon. Joseph Wearam, Democratic State Senator, of Lewistown, Wm. Parsons, Jr., of Lock Haven, and J. M. Bally, of Elk County, with other distinguished Return Judges, were in town on Tuesday last, giving an official touch to the election returns.

—A few weeks before the recent election one of the candidates hereabouts, aspiring to one of the county offices, hailed a darkey on the street, and taking him one side tried to persuade him, with smiles and pleasant words, to give him his vote and support at the then coming election. The darkey looked up, and with a knowing wing, exclaimed, "No sar; yer can't cum it ober dis chile, no how. Yer's all right now wid yer grins and pomises, but soon as de 'lecshun am ober how would it be den? Why, yer'd chuck me oberboard quick as a wink, and pile mud top er me! Yah! ha! ha!! No sar, I is a independent darkey, and can't be bought by no man.'

May that darkey live to celebrate his golden wedding.

OUR ASSOCIATED PRESS LETTER.

PHILADELPHIA, November 17, 1874.

SCANDALOUS.

I trusted that this city would be spared its scandal of a pastoral character, but man proposes and woman's weak, especially when the man is a clergyman. The disappearance of Rev. John W. Gerdiman, pastor of St. Bonifacius Roman Chathoilc Church in this city, and the departure for an uncertain destination of the pretty organist of the church, Miss Maggie Wittig, caused the congregation to look into the matter; and this is the result: Father Gerdiman was loved and trusted by his flock; they made him treasurer of the savings fund of the poorer members of the church, and although the fund amounted to nearly $100,000 no security was required, and auditing committees were unthought of. Wealthier members endorsed notes for the pastor which were discounted by other wealthy brethren. A few days ago the pastor took himself off, but forgot to take up the notes, or return the saving fund money, and evidently Miss Wittig went in hot pursuit of the absconding ex-pastor for she has been missing since the night Gerdiman left. The conclusion of the victimized is that Gerdiman has stolen the money, gone to Germany, and intends to marry Maggie, who is pretty, intelligent, and 20 years of age, a Protestant, and generally regarded as the pink of propriety.

Father Gerdiman was born near Munster, in Westphalia; he was Secretary for the German congregations in this city, stood high in the esteem of Bishop Wood, and Catholics generally, was remarkably talented, and an eloquent orator. Since his flight, Bishop Wood received a note from Gerdiman in which he stated his reason for leaving the Catholic church was that he could not believe in the infallibility of the Pope. The temptation of woman and wealth was too strong for this fellow's vow of celibacy, and with Maggie and the money he can live like a prince in the Empire of Germany.

An attempt was made at the Point Breeze Park by Budd Doble to have Goldsmith Maid beat her own quickest time, 2 14, two heats were driven, the first in 2 21½ and the other in 2 18½ and the Maid was then withdrawn.

The day following, a race took place between the pacer Copper Bottom and American Girl. But one heat was trotted for when the Girl went flying over the score the pacer was so near out of sight that the judges said C. B. was distanced. I suggest that hereafter this Pittsburg pacer does his racing against a clothes horse or a night-mare, and if he cannot beat these, then he be made to run against the "ring" politicians in Pittsburgh as they are easily beaten.

The Insane department of our city almshouse has accommodations for 600 patients, but is crowded by 1104 insane persons now there on treatment. A few days ago Solomon Syper killed George Howe, both insane. Syper admitted the killing, and said it was done because Howe did not belong to the church he did and that he meant to kill a good many more. There were eight persons in the room where the murder was committed, but only one, John Gear, could give an intelligent account of the affair which was that "Spyer was swearing and making a great noise in the ward and that Howe asked him to keep quiet, Spyer then 'went for' Howe, knocked him down, kicked him about the head and body and choked the breath out of him."

THE HERALD HOAX.

The ridiculous hoax which occupied a full page of the New York Herald detailing the escape of the wild beasts from the Zoological Garden, and of their having devoured Ben Butler, John Morrissey and other statesmen, is generally regarded by reflecting Philadelphians as conclusive evidence that the recent elections, in having settled so summarily the third term business, have, also, unsettled the Herald man's reason.

What a great pity; but then his attack of Cæsarism was so fierce, and he has been suffering from it so long that temporary derangement may be requisite to produce a permanent cure. Those eminent authorities Bucknell and Tuke, in Psychological Medicine—Sketches in Bedlam, say that: It is probable that wherever delusions or hallucinations are detected, there is a broader and deeper substractum of mania of which they are but trivial manifestations.

In view of this, I ask, is it proper to permit the Herald man to go at large? In his frenzy and violence may he not harm those who destroyed his Cæsar?

THE CENTENNIAL.

The ladies of Washington intend holding a Centennial tea party on the 16th day of December next, under the auspices of the Women's Centennial Executive Committee of that city. The rotunda of the Capitol has been secured as the place in which the affair will come off. The ladies purpose making this the grand event during the winter Session of Congress.

During the early part of the week the Centennial Committe of Boston issued a call to the people of Massachusetts for Centennial subscriptions, and appointed agents to canvass to State for subscriptions to the stock of the Centennial Commission.

At the regular weekly meeting of the Women's Centennial Committee of this city, it was announced by the President Mrs. Gillespie, that J. S. Clarke, the eminent comedian had sent his check for $1,000 in aid of the Centennial, and that during Christmas week he would give a professional benefit, the proceeds to be devoted to the same cause.

CHEAP TRANSPORTATION.

The recent Semi-annual exhibit of the Pennsylvania rail road company shows that for the six months ending October 31st 1874, the profits were so large that a dividend of $3,422,165.00 was declared and that after the payment of all expenses as well as his very large dividend for dull times, the sum of $1,411,697.00 remained as undivided profit in the hands of the Treasurer. Of this latter sum, $876,333 are held, as the report says "to provide for contingencies," and the remaining half million is carried to the profit side of the ledger.

In order to earn this undivided surplus of $1,411,697.00 it required the company to carry 4,030,563 bushels of grain to market at the average price of 35 cents per bushel. Had this corporation been content with a 5 per cent. dividend over all possible expenses, the sum of $1,411,697.00 would not have been wrung from the producers in the West, or the consumers of wheat and corn in the East.

As one dollar to-day has a purchasing capacity that twice that amount had three years ago, I presume there are a half a million people, right here in Philadelphia, who think a six per cent. dividend per annum during these hard times ought to satisfy the most exacting of shareholders in this corporation.

In view of the fact that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, intends taking a big hand in the election of a Senator to succeed John Scott, it is well for those members of the Pennsylvania legislature who have yet to express their choice for Senator to bear in mind that the sum of $876,333 is "held for contingences."

Speaking of Scott's successor reminds me that the gentlemen from this city who will be forwarded by their friends for the Senatorship are Hon. S. J. Randall, Hon. Richard Vaux, and Hon. James Campbell. The latter was Post-master General under the Pierce administration Vaux was once Mayor of this city and is a wheel horse of the Democratic party and Congressman Randall is too well and favorably known by the people of Pennsylvania to require a biographical sketch from my pen.

Four well known brokers in this city were victimized during the week to the tune of ten thousand dollars by the sale of bogus city warrants. There were two sets of these bogus warrants; one set a perfect fac simile of those issued by the Mayor to the police; and the other by the Board of Education for school purpose; each warrant required the forgery of three signatures and was so well executed as to deceive the City Controller who is required to countersign all city warrants and who informed one of the victimized brokers that the signature was his and that the warrant was genuine; upon this information the warrants were purchased. A man representing himself as Wm. H. Randall, sold one of the warrants for $2,400 to J. E. Ridgway, for which a check for $2,000 upon a bank was given, and the balance paid in cash; the bank refused to cash the check, without a voucher, and the check was taken to W. D. Bartley, son-in-law of Jay Cooke, who was just about cashing it when Ridgway appeared, he having learned of his having been taken in. Randall was taken into custody and put into detective Taggart's hands, who started off with him to the police station, but Taggart turning aside for a moment to converse with a gentleman, Randall improved the opportunity to escape and immediately left for parts unknown, and detective Taggart is of opinion that he reached there. I have never yet been able to determine the necessity for detectives, unless it is to cover the escape of criminals.

Hon. Wm. F. Smith, an ex-member of the legislature of this state, from the Germantown district, paid a visit on Saturday to the House of Correction, of which he is a Commissioner; while there he had a paralytic stroke, so severe that for two days he remained in a comatose condition. On Tuesday he was taken to his home: his recovery is doubtful.

Hon. Samuel J. Randall purposes offering, at the December Congress Session, an amendment to the Constitution limiting the Presidency to a single term of six years.

A package of Danish butter, put up in tin cans eighteen months ago, and shipped from London to Bolivia, South America, was recently exhibited before the Butter and Cheese Exchange, with a note inquiring whether as good butter can be made in this country. As this butter was no better than our ordinary 'roll' butter, it may be safely assumed, that with proper exertions, the entire butter trade of South America can be secured for our butter produce.

THE STORY OF THE MAPLE-TREE.

Just where the children troop along
At morn and noon together,
The maple-tree grew green and strong
Through all the summer weather.

The little tree, so slim, so green
Among the birches round it;
It only helped to make a screen,
And no one e'er had found it.

"Now summer days began to fade,"
Then said the maple, sighing;
"And no one sees me in this shade!
What is the use of trying!"

And while one night she fretted thus,
The air grew cold and colder,
And there came a painter down the road,
His colors on his shoulder.

Jack frost adown the winding way
Came whistling, leaping, singing;
And as he ran about in play,
His paints behind went swinging.

Then how the spatters flew about,
And streak both red and yellow,
Till all the leaves that leaned far our
Glowed like the apples yellow.

The maple watched the colors grow,
Then cried, "Oh, stop! oh, listen!
Before my leaves fall, paint me now
Until in red I glisten."

Jack Frost stands still. So small the tree,
Hid safe among the birches,
He stoops uncertain; then he climbs,
And rock and bank he searches.

"Oh, paint me please!" the maple cried,
"Bright red and red all over,
Till each one that may walk or ride
My beauty shall discover."

No sooner said than done it is;
The swift brush plies he singing,
Then swings away, upon his back
His brushes lightly singing.

Adown the road the painter goes;
In silent joy she watches,
Till the far-off hills betray his path
In red and purple blotches.

How splended shines the maple-tree,
With green around and under;
The golden rods in all the place
Bow down in reverent wonder.

And how she scorns the lady birch
That stands so close beside her;
Her head she tosses, waves her arms,
And shakes her leaves out wider.

O, silly little maple-tree!
Have done with all your prinking;
Along the road the children see,
Of fun and pleasure seeking.

"Oh, look! halloa! come see the show!
A tree just like a feather!
Let's stick it in our hats, you know,
And march down all together!"

They swarm the raspberry bushes through;
They tread the thistles under;
They gather round the trembling tree,
Intent on scarlet plunder.

O, dainty little tree! She stands
Like a beleaguered city;
They bend and break with feet and hands,—
The jubilant banditti!

Then off they march in scarlet line,
And blaze through all the meadow!
But the birches droop their glistening leaves,
And screen her with their shadow.

THE LARK'S NEST.

Once was a meadow, where in June weather
Daisies and buttercups blossomed together.
There came a field-lark and built her nest,—
Five speckled eggs she hid under her breast;
Sitting alone, while afar above her
Rang the sweet voice of her mate and true lover;
While the brown bees all about her were humming,
And the gay butterflies going and coming,
Dear little mother-lark never grew weary,
Never once found herself lonesome or dreary.
Five baby-larks to be had for the hatching!
That, she thought, paid for her waiting and watching.

When, by and by, came a creeping and cheeping,
That told the young things from the egg-shells were peeping,—
"Oh!" cried the mother-bird, chirping, caressing,
"What have I done to deserve such a blessing!
Perfect in form and delightful in feature,
Who could have dreamed of such exquisite treasures?"
Day after day in rapture and pleasure,
She flutted and fidgetted over her treasure;
Cuddled them, sang to them, morning and noon,
Told all the sweet things that happen in June—
How the red roses, and larkspur, and clover,
Dressed in their jewels would sparkle all over;
How, by and by,—and the lark gave a sigh,—
All those poor blossoms would wither and die.
But before snow came, or wintry wild weather,
They would spread wing and all fly south together.

Once with a tale on the tip of her tongue,
Poor little mother-lark left it unsung;
Over her frightened head, gleaming and ringing,
Came a long scythe, through the meadow-grass swinging,
Poor little lark, all a-tremble for breath,
Covered her babies, and waited her death.
But it flashed over her; then to the crisis
Bravely she rose, with her ready devices;
Wasted no time in complaint or repining,
But plucked the dry grasses, and twisting and twining
Wove her a roof to arch over her nest,
Nor stop for a moment to idle or rest,
Weaving it, one of the mowing-men found her.
Then he declared that on her and her brood,
Danger nor terror again should intrude.
So all the day, through the coming and going,
Mother-lark sat undisturbed by the mowing;
And long before winter, or stormy wild weather,
All the young larks had gone flying together.

CUPID AT SEA.

CHAPTER I.

It was during the great cotton panic of 186—that so many of our merchant princes were summarily deposed from their eminence of wealth and power, and forced to 'hide their diminished heads in comparative obscurity. Countless gay equipages, which once haunted the aristocratic 'shades' of Bold Street, Liverpool, were absent; their places would know them no more. Fine houses, costly furniture, and many treasured mementos of better days came to the hammer; and men with moody countenances and furrowed brows, anxiously scanning each day's telegram, to see how 'cotton' stood; it being to them a sort of merchantile barometer, upon the rise and fall of which depends the fortunes of their respective 'houses;' nay, the very preservation of home itself. It was a year of 'ups' as well as 'downs.' Others whose path had hitherto been toilsome and beset with difficulties, suddenly found themselves—by means of some lucky hit or timely speculation—at the top of the tree; and clerks and employees of one day, were masters and almost millionaires the next.

It was a time of harass and struggle, wonderment and mad speculation; few went to rest as they rose in the morning, and men 'made merchandise,' only too readily, of honor, and truth, and honesty, in the race for wealth which had so strangely opened out to them; and placed the fallen fortunes around as stepping-stones for their own agrandizement.

Perhaps this is not to be wondered at in a world and age where 'Number One' reigns paramount—the universal motto, 'Every man for himself'—the argument, 'Heaven help those who help themselves.' Yes, my friends, but not out of other people's pockets. A man should take pleasure in earning his daily bread; this is the only method to insure independence.

But my story is not of the cotton panic, or the merits of its different transactions; it was merely the cause from which the after effects sprung.

Suffice it to say that the firm of Stanton & Sons, though not toppled over by the individual losses, or knocked down into the mine of destitution by a neighboring crash, was not feeling its 'feet' quite so comfortably as might be, and it became advisable for one of the partners to take a voyage across the Atlantic, pay a visit to 'Brother Jonathan,' and look up our branch business in the New World. So, after some little demur and consultation, it was decided that I, the eldest son, should be the one to brave the dangers of the briny deep, my father's presence in Liverpool being of too great importance at this crisis, and my younger brother scarcely conversant enough with general business to undertake the expedition.

Thus it happened that one fine day, at the end of the summer, I found myself on the Prince's Landing Stage, accompanied by my father and Joe, awaiting the arrival of the tender which was to convey me and my few belongings to the steam ship 'Prussia,' from whose red-tunnel already issued the first prelude of departure. There was no heartrending farewells to be gone through in my case, so we stood chatting on business matters till the very last moment, the 'governor' then returned to the office, my brother bearing me company to the vessel.

She was a fine specimen of those splendid 'screws' which frequent the broad waters of the Mersey; and her accommodations did credit to her far-famed owners. She lay close to Birkenhead, and, wind and tide serving, the tender was soon alongside, in spite of its cargo of passengers and heavy luggage. Then commenced a scene of bustle, and 'confusion worse confounded;' and, after waiting to see my one solitary trunk safely hauled up, I carried my valise, rugs, &c., to my cabin, and, leaning over the brass railing which surrounded the promenade deck, we (that is to say, Joe and myself) proceeded leisurely to watch the manœvreus of those below us, esteeming ourselves well out of the crowd and melee. How mercifully those great brownbreasted tars tugged at the boxes and barrels as they rolled in one after another. Down they went with a thud, which must have caused many a heart-throb to their respective owners. Frail young creatures were trying to identify their especial property, while here and there a few, saddened and tearful, sat apart from the noise and confusion, and drank in thirstily parting words from those they perhaps might never see again. Added to this, the prospect of a foreign land was a sad contrast to Old England.

But at length the last box was landed on deck and the great bell clanged out its signal of dismissal to all who were not voyagers like myself, another answered it, and a third re-echoed from the paddle box of the tender,—there was a sudden clasping of hands, a rush of many feet, the paddles revolved, away went the little vessel with its modicum of departed friends and relatives, and the big ship stood alone, a few moments amongst its vast living freight bending over the side, one moment waving handkerchiefs in mute farewell, the next pressing them to their weeping eyes in uncontrolable emotion.

Perfectly calm and unmoved by any such tender associations myself, I had room in my heart to feelsorrow for those whose lives had been thus riven asunder by inexorable fate, and I sat quietly moralizing as we steamed out at the river and into the broad sea beyond. Yet I felt a slight twinge of something unusual as the old familiar landmarks disappeared. But the lighthouse off New Brighton and the Red Nose Rocks gradually faded from view; and when the last speck of English soil became indistinct I went hurriedly to my cabin and tried to sleep away the feeling that overcame me; but this was impossible; so I remained contemplating the many scenes which I should soon probably witness, and was only aroused by a summons to dinner.

I had fortunately secured a seat at the captain's table, and had reason to congratulate myself upon having taken a friend's hint on the subject. I did ample justice to the multiplicity of viands before me, (travelers by the Line are not likely to starve through lack of nourishment,) anticipating the time when Nature should refuse to be beguiled into partaking of the tempting morsels prepared for her delectation; and afterwards had leisure to scan my fellow passengers—a Babel of voices, chiefly male I confess, having been added to the clatter of plates and jingle of glasses. I found people conversing in divers tongues around me. American, German, Irish, English—ladies of each nation being in the minority—and scarcely in such high spirits as the 'stronger vessels.'

Immediately opposite to me were a couple who considerably attracted my attention, though courtesy forbade me taking more than a passing glance at them now and then. A young lady, in deep mourning, was quietly conversing with another much more voluble, and also her senior, and from stray sentences I caught, it appeared the former was a novice in this mode of traveling, while the other had accomplished the voyage several times.

But people on board ship fraternize early, and unceremoniously, and they chatted as if they had been old friends, instead of self introduced an hour previously over the mutual bewilderment of finding storage for their numerous feminine appendages, in the limited number of square feet denominated 'stateroom.'

They then drifted into the invariable and never-failing topic of interest with their sex, children, and I gathered that both (and yet the one in mourning looked almost too young to be the mother of a family) possessed one or more 'olive branches,' then in charge of the stewardess down below. But the righthand neighbor, an Irish diamond of the purest water, engrossed my attention, and the meal over, we adjourned to the smoking quarters, and joined by several others, passed the next hour or two discussing affairs individual and public.

Passing through the saloon on my way to my cabin, when about to 'turn in' for the night, I glanced at the cards which marked the places occupied by my vis-a-vis at dinner, and read 'Mrs. Conway' and 'Mrs. Reyd.'

Then she was married—the little dark one, dressed in black,—and the children she alluded to must be hers. But why such deep mourning. Ah, a widow! But how young! She wore no tell-tale cap certainly, though her hair was softly banded from her low white forehead, and coiled up in a massive knot behind; and I had noticed, on the third finger of her left hand, several handsome gold rings, but not a stone of any description.

I went to my berth, but instead of sleeping, sat looking out from my round port-hole of a window upon the great heaving mass around me, as the noble vessel made a way for herself through the calm, yielding waves, leaving behind her a track of seething foam, which the glorious harvest moon touched with radiance till it looked like a train of liquid light, narrowing to the smallest thread of silver.

CHAPTER II.

Next morning few of the fairer sex showed up at breakfast,—more from sickness, I suspected, than from indisposition, for the sea was like a duck-pond, only with more of blue than green about its sparkling surface; but as I was mounting the companion-ladder, in order to take a morning constitutional, Captain Gilmour came up, and putting a paper into my hand, asked if I would be kind enough to give it to Mrs. Reyd, who was on the promenade deck. Pleased enough at this slight excuse for an introduction, I went to the farther end, where the pretty little widow was standing, surrounded by several young children, Mrs. Conway and my Irish acquaintance near. The group had evidently been indulging in a mild game of romps; but, on my approach, a tiny fairy girl took refuge in Mrs. Reyd's arms, while a boy, sturdy, and somewhat older, clung to her dress.

Raising my hat, and holding out the package given me by the captain, I said, 'Captain Gilmour desired me to give you this, Mrs. Reyd. Am I right?' I added, interrogatively, for a somewhat surprised and amused look came into her face, as well as additional color. She exchanged glances with Mrs. Conway who also seemed diverted by something.

'She may think it odd, my speaking,' I soliloquized, while Mrs. Reyd answered with a slight inclination, 'O yes,—and thank you, Mr.——'

'Stanton, at your service,' I replied, bowing, and proceeded to remark upon the lovely wheather we had had so far, asking if it was her first trial at 'a life on the ocean wave,' as if I had not heard her say so the day before.

'Yes, it is my first voyage,' she replied; 'but if it is to go on as prosperously and pleasantly as now, I shall not mind if I repeat it.'

'I am afraid you will not be quite so much in love with it after the next few days,' remarked Mrs. Conway. 'Wait till the huge Atlantic gives you a tossing, and then——'

'Well you need not put me out of conceit with it before my time,' laughed Mrs. Reyd; 'that is too bad. Don't you think so, Mr. Stanton?'

'Decidedly,' said I. 'Besides, I am also in my apprenticeship, and would rather not anticipate evil.'

'I don't believe I shall be ill. I have made up my mind not to be,' said the little widow, determinedly.

'Oh, my dear, I consider myself a good sailor, having crossed five or six times; but I never yet escaped entirely,' said Mrs. Conway. 'I am afraid 'making up your mind' will not help you in the least.'

'We shall see, Mrs. Conway,' said the widow.

'Yes, we shall see,' I added, lugubriously, visions of scanty 'feeds' and ducked 'heeds' passing before me.

'But are you not returning to England, Mrs. Reyd?' I asked.

By this time we were promenading the deck side by side, the children playing by themselves and Mrs. Conway had vanished.

'I think not,' she returned, mournfully; 'I am going out to my father (who has settled in New York,) taking Artie and Cissie with me; they have sustained a great loss; you see.'

I read it all in that brief sentence. The loss of husband involving that of home, and the young wife—so early left alone—traversing the ocean for the sake of providing her children with a shelter in her father's house.

'It is very sad,' I returned; 'but I trust there may be brighter days in store for you all.'

'Thank you,' she said, simply; and as we turned, the children came up and she bade them speak to me.

I held out my arms to the baby girl, but she was very shy; Artie took to me more kindly. They were not like their mother—being fair, with large blue eyes and soft pearl-like complexions, set off by their little coats and hats—and I am afraid I came to the conclusion that their father must have been that good-looking abomination—a pretty man.

We went down to luncheon together, and chatted over the meal quite sociably occasionally quizzing some of our eccentric fellow-passengers, (Mrs. Conway assisting con amore,) particularly an American lady of fastidious ideas, who, after turning up her already aspiring nasal organ at the various comestibles, eventually partook of some beefsteak and onions.

Before the dinner-hour arrived we had entered Queenstown harbor—the once famed 'Cove of Cork,' whose beauties have been so often described that I need not here inflict them upon my readers.

I had time for a hasty landing, and when I returned to the vessel I found our number considerably augmented. Among the most noticeable additions was a lively young bride of eighteen, known ultimately as 'Mrs. Pat,' from the frequent repetition of her bridegroom's name, uttered with the daintiest of brogues.

Truly, after my experience on board of the different denizens of Erin's Isle, I can quite believe (as an amusing Irish lady once assured me, herself a native of the place,) 'you may always know County Cork people when you see them.'

The green slopes and sunny waters of the 'Cove' faded from our view, and we were indeed 'Rock'd in the cradle of the deep.' Over the next two days there rests an ominous silence. With the majority, Mrs. Conway's lively forebodings were verified.

I came off better than many for I joined the greatly-diminished forces at our luncheon, dinner, tea-table, but my cigar and pipe were ignominiously banished from my sight and smoking became no longer a 'joy forever.' Even blithe Mrs. Conway herself had succumbed to fate, and I could not resist sending a mischievous inquiry to Mrs. Reyds' stateroom, asking how she was, and if she had 'made up her mind' when she would make her appearance on deck again.

Back came Mrs. Reyd's compliments, hoping I had not suffered very much. To console myself for the loss of the mother's society, I made friends with the children, for they had marvelously escaped the prevailing epidemic, and I slyly encouraged them to talk of their antecedents, but was not repaid by any marked success. Thinking to win their confidence, I asked them where their mamma was.

'Down there,' replied Cissie, with a preternaturally grave face, and pointing with her chubby finger,—'all in the dark, she added, in a hushed whisper.

I considered this addition quite superfluous, but did not tell the child so.

'And where is papa?' I said to Artie.

'He's went away,' was the answer,—just what I expected.

'When did he go?' I asked.

'A great many days,' said the child.

Not much satisfaction there; so, relying upon my own surmises rather than information, I turned from the subject to one more suited to their infantile capacities.

On the third day the wind changed, and the rolling of the vessel somewhat abated; besides, the sufferers had become habituated to their mal de mer, and a few made their appearance again at table and on deck, the lady of beefsteak notoriety, being one of the last,—and no wonder.

So I had once more the pleasure of welcoming Mrs. Reyd to the upper deck, and congratulating her upon her strength of mind, and determination not to be made a victim. She was a good deal paler, and her eyes looked melancholy instead of humorous; but by dint of wrapping up in rugs and furs she was able to remain on deck and enjoy the delicious breeze, which, though cold, was refreshing. As she reclined there, her small face and soft dark orbs peeping out of her warm nest, I could not help being reminded of a tiny brown mouse; such a sweet, 'kissable' little thing she looked, that for the moment I forgot her marriage vows, her maternity and thought of her as a bright young girl—and as 'Mousie' I ever afterwards loved best to think of her. Even then, during my two days' involuntary banishment, her image had been frequently before me.

By the evening most had regained their 'sea-legs,' and with Mrs. Reyd leaning on my arm, and accompanied by several of our fellow passengers, we went forward to watch the steerage passengers dance, which was a pursuit of pleasure under difficulties to them, I should fancy, for a rocking vessel is not the easiest floor to dance upon, and they sometimes came to grief in their gyrations.

A few songs from the gentlemen followed, in which I took no part, preferring to 'chaff' with merry Mrs. Conway, her husband sitting composedly by, or better still, carrying on a whispered conversation, under cover of the music, with my interesting charge. We had a slight emeute at last. A Yankee, who refused to stand up and take off his hat when the national anthem was sung, excited some hot-headed, ultra-loyal English, and high words ensued; but our gallant skipper made piece, and brother Jonathan marched away with his 'dander' up.

After twenty-four hours of quiet, the waves gave us a second demonstration of their playfulness; but I was weather proof by this time, and I cosxed Mrs. Reyd on deck, and gradually she became inured also. I joined her and the Conways at a 'rubber' in the evening, when her voice rang out as merrily as her friend's, and I was deeper in the meshes than ever. Though I had reached the age of seven-and-twenty, I had never owned to being in love; but now the symptoms seemed aggravated, and I didn't know what to say to them.

The little lady had a laugh at my expense one day. Invading the sailor's quarters, she and Mrs. Conway were fined according to custom. Seeing her discomforture, I began to tease.

'Female curiosity too strong, eh, Mrs. Reyd? Happily it is no Blue Beard's chamber.'

'Say rather that undue advantage was taken of our ignorance, Mr. Stanton.'

'Very pretty excuse, ladies! I replied joining them where they stood.

A grinning Jack Tar was close beside me, and before I was aware of it the magic chalk-line was around me, I was caught in my own trap. A burst of merriment ensued.

'You cannot plead ignorance at any rate, Mr. Stanton.'

'No,' I returned; 'it was the temptation that proved too strong for me.' So I had the best of it after all, for she colored slightly, and turned away with a hasty footstep.

CHAPTER III.

Life on board ship is necessarily monotonous, and one day passes very much like another, varied by a dance on deck, whist in a saloon, or a quiet walk in the evening, 'studying astronomy,' as Mr. O'Shaunessy remarked, rather maliciously. We never pretended to do anything of the kind, I am certain but it was the pleasantest part of the day to me, and I felt quite sorry to think how soon the passage would be accomplished, and that it was possible we might never meet again.

One crumpled leaf disarranged my 'bed of roses' considerably. Latterly a sentimental young German fellow, named Hausmann had thought himself 'smitten,' and came pestering round Mrs. Reyd at all hours, and gabbled his detestable broken English, till I felt half inclined to choke him.

It came to our last evening, and I determined he should not have the felicity of walking by her side again, if by fair means or foul I should circumvent him.

Thanks to the rule of the dinner-table, he did not sit near her, while I had experienced the happiness of being her vis-a-vis the whole time; so as the meal concluded I whispered across, 'Are you inclined for a last promenade, Mrs. Reyd?'

'With pleasure,' she replied, and a half sigh escaped her, and upon rising from the table we went on deck together, braving comments. What do I care for them?

After taking a few turns I fancied she looked tired; so, fetching a low chair, and covering her with a rug, I sat down at her feet, and gave myself up to the moment's pleasure and infatuation, careless of consequences. She spoke the silence by asking, 'When do you expect to return to England, Mr. Stanton?'

'I can scarcely say, Mrs. Reyd,—it so entirely depends upon the business which brought me over. I dare say I may be absent two or three months, altogether. I shall be very much occupied; but if you will allow me, I shall hope to call and see you. May I?'

She turned her head a little, and a peculiar smile parted her lips while she said,—'I am sure my father will be very happy to see you. He is living in Brooklyn at present.'

'And you will be with him, of course.'

'Oh yes,' was the reply; and she laughed, as I thought, unnecessarily.

There was occasionally something about her which I could not understand,—such a strange, amused look, which puzzled me greatly, but not anything I could ask to have explained.

'Papa will give you any information you may need, as you are a stranger,' she went on: 'but you must not expect gaiety. Our loss is too recent, and we are too English to follow American fashions exclusively.'

'A welcome is all I shall need,' I returned, looking up, and trying to read in her eyes, which for once were shy and downcast, whether it would be awaiting me.

'I mean I have no brothers or sisters,' she said. 'They make a house lively for visitors, and my father is naturally quiet and reserved——' She hesitated a moment, then concluded, abruptly,—'But he is very fond of the children, and they are equally attached to him.'

'Can they remember him?' I asked.

'Not very well perhaps, but they will soon be won over again.'

'How long is it since he left England?'

'Not quite a year,' she replied. 'Artie was three, Cissie two, when he sailed; and we were to have followed him in six months; then came our loss.'

Again that look—and she never spoke of her bereavement as 'mine but our.'

Oh how I longed to ask her something about her husband!—to know if she had loved him deeply—with all the warmth which I felt sure was in her nature—or if, married so young as she must have been—there was yet room in her soul for another love, which if not so fresh might be as true. But I could not bring my lips to frame a direct question, such as should not betray too much eagerness in its tones, so I let it pass, and resumed the conversation, by saying, 'I never believed it possible that a voyage could be made so pleasant. I for one shall bear its memory about me always.'

'Yes, it has been very enjoyable,' returned my companion; 'So many nice people—we are more like a little family party. Mrs. Conway is a dear creature; I am going to see her soon; she lives at Florence, Massachusetts, and has given me a pressing invitation.'

'I wish she had extended her invitation to me,' I sighed, mournfully. 'And what is your opinion of your other acquaintances, made on board the Prussia, Mrs. Reyd—Mr. O'Shaunessey, par exemple?'

'He is a true Irishman,' she replied. Hot-headed warm-hearted, and amusing.'

'Herr Hansman also?' I added, with a twinge of jealousy, as I awaited her reply.

'He is amusing, too, in his way,' she said; and she blushed, knowing I had been a listener to some of his lieder ohn, worte.

'Sentimental simpleton?' I muttered sotto voce, 'You consider his sweet speeches amusing them?'

'Now don't be satirical, Mr. Stanton.'

'Perhaps you will tell me I am amusing you, too?' I demanded, victoriously.

'You certainly do amuse me at this moment,' she replied.

'I am happy in affording you food for laughter, Mrs. Reyd. Ladies are fond for such trifling nourishment.'

'I am afraid you have not been indulging in anything so digestible, Mr. Stanton. Something has disagreed with you, surely.'

'You are satirical, now, Mrs. Reyd. Forgive me! I did not mean anything personal; and if I was jealous of that miserable little foreigner, I had no right to taunt you with it.'

The darkness growing deeper, she rose from her seat. We traversed the deck in silence; it was deserted. Mrs. Conway was in her 'state-room' preparing for the morrow's exodus, and we parted at the bottom of the 'companion,' with only the dim light of a swing-lamp shining down upon us. I took both her hands, murmuring, 'Will you forgive me?'

'Yes, oh yes,' she answered, hurriedly, raising her bonnie brown eyes. Down they went again instantly. Did they read all that mine were saying?

I pressed the tiny hands in one long clasp, nay, even left a trembling kiss upon them; but she snatched them away and vanished from my sight.

CHAPTER IV., AND LAST

The next morning by seven o'clock we had entered the 'Narrows,' and very soon the tender came alongside to take off the passengers. I was standing, looking up my luggage, when I saw Mrs. Reyd approaching me, leaning on the arm of a tall, grave man, whom I should never have imagined to be her father. He seemed too young; but there were many traces of care and anxiety upon his broad brow. Artie was clinging to his coat; but Cissie looked on with dubious face and pouting lip, and ran to me in preference to the strange, bearded gentleman. I stepped forward.

'This is my father, Mr. Stanton, said Mrs. Reyd.

He held out his hand, welcoming me most cordially.

We went off shore together, and I saw them safe into one of those giant steamers which ply between the city and its suburbs, promising to call the first moment business left me leisure.

Not a word had I been able to speak privately to Mrs. Reyd, and I dared not think how she might resent my liberty of the previous evening. However, she did not appear less friendly, though perhaps a degree more reserved; and I breathed fresh hope upon receiving the renewed invitation.

What with business interviews, and journeys to the interior i the cause of our 'house,' a whole month elapsed before I found myself able to pay my longed-for visit to Brooklyn. Once I had met the father and daughter 'lionizing' in Broadway; but my pleasure was limited to a few commonplace remarks on their part, and apologies on mine, as I was hurrying to keep my appointment in the city; and I had to console myself with the memory of how brightly the little widow's eyes had sparkled, and with what a sweet smile she had greeted me.

But at last, after much impatient waiting, I found myself at the door of 17 Heron street, Brooklyn, and had given a tremendously imposing double knock, when it flashed across my mind that I had forgotten the name of Mrs. Reyd's father,—or stay !—had I ever heard it? I began to think not. She had merely introduced him as 'my father,' and I could not re-call any other mention of him.

At this juncture the door was opened by a neat and less pretentious individual than the generality of 'helps' found in New York; and, making a virtue of necessity, I put a good face on the matter, and boldly asked for 'Mrs. Reyd.'

The girl stared at me, as if bewildered. I repeated my wish to see her mistress.

'Did you say Mrs. Reyd, sir?'

'Yes.'

'There is no Mrs. Reyd, sir.'

It was my turn to stare, as I inwardly anathematized what I considered frightful stupidity.

'Is she away from home?' I essayed again.

'No,' replied the domestic, hesitating, and seeming inclined to giggle. Then, as if a bright idea struck her, she said, 'Miss Reyd is at home, sir, perhaps you would like to see her?'

Happy thought. She at any rate could give some information concerning my late fellow-traveler; so, signifying my consent, I followed the maid up stairs.

But who was Miss Reyd? I marvelled as I ascended. I had never so much as heard her name. Some maiden sister of Mr.——? No, that could not be; he was Mrs. Reyd's father, not father-in-law. How was——?

The door was opened and my name was announced to a lady seated in a low, soft-cushioned arm-chair, working.

What an unblushing, 'postponer of truth' was the wretched little 'help' just disappearing from my view! Why, there sat the pretty little widow herself, looking as graceful and shy and mouselike as in the days when she lay on deck wrapped up in rugs and furs, nothing to be seen but the small, pale face, and dark luminous eyes.

She advanced and greeted me warmly, apologizing for her father's absence.

'The servant told me that Mrs. Reyd was not at home,' said I, 'and yet she ushers me into your very presence, after asking if I would like to see Miss Reyd.'

A crimson flush mounted to the fair white brow, and she answered, impetuously. 'We must cease this masquerading now, Mr. Stanton! I am Miss Reyd and not Mrs., and I perhaps owe you an apology for having kept you in the darkness so long.'

This was indeed a revelation, and I looked my surprise.

"But why—how—did the mistake arise?'

'Very simply,' she replied. 'It was commenced in ignorance. By some error on the part of the agent, my passage was taken in the name of Mrs. Reyd, and consequently my card at the dinner-table was marked in the same manner. I had not heeded this till you accosted me, and then Mrs. Conway thought it a good joke, and persuaded me not to undeceive you. I had also an idea that as circumstances necessitated my traveling alone, I could do so better as a married woman than a single one; so I let it pass. Somehow there has never seemed an opening for explanation. I should have told you, only for Mrs. Conway; but it amused us both so much to think how unconscious you were. You thought I was a young and interesting widow—now did you not?' she concluded, looking archly in my face.

'I did, most certainly—and the children?' I demanded.

'They are my step-brother and sister,' was the reply.

I looked incredulous.

'I see that I must be more explicit,' she continued. 'A few years ago my father married a second time—a fair young girl scarcely older than I am now—(he is not yet forty-five himself.)—and soon afterwards he became unfortunate in business, till things came to such a crisis that twelve months since he sailed for America, to try and carve out a fresh fortune for himself and family in the New World. He left his young wife and two children, Artie and Crissie, with myself in England, intending to send for us as soon as fairer prospects opened for him, but before the year expired my gentle step-mother (who was more like my sister,) was called away from us suddenly, and then my father sent for me and the children to join him here. The rest you know; and now I trust you will forgive my innocent deception.'

'I should be a wretch not to do so, my dear Miss Reyd; but I cannot understand—the children called you 'mamma."

'No, that was your mistake,' she said, 'though I don't wonder at it. My name is Anna, and they in their imperfect speech, laid too much stress upon the second syllable, calling me 'An-nah;' hence the delusion.'

'Well,' said I smilingly, 'you have had a laugh at my expense.'

'Perhaps,' she returned. 'Yet I did not see why we should be less friendly on that account.'

'Far from it.' I said; 'the memory of that voyage will never leave me; and I think I am not sorry that my interesting widow has been transformed into a no less interesting young lady.'

'Why so?' she asked.

'I will tell you some day,' I returned, giving her a look she could not fail to interpret, and a hand-clasp she would not easily forget. It was all I had time for; Mr. Reyd's appearance at this juncture cutting short any further love-making I might have contemplated. Not that I intended doing anything rash, or likely to imperil my future; but I did feel heartily glad that no other had been before me in winning that gentle heart, and I did not despair of becoming its fortunate possessor ere many moons were over.

They say love is proverbially blind, and perhaps a little perverse into the bargain; but I had so fully taken up the idea of her widowhood—circumstances aiding and abeting my delusion—that I never made the lightest attempt to put it aside.

Mr. Reyd—made acquainted with the ruse—was greatly amused, and during dinner constantly reverted to, and laughed heartily at, my mystification, till the grave man to whom I had been introduced on the deck of the Prussia became quite a changed being, and a genial pleasant host.

Thus my first visit to Haron street passed off with eclat, in spite of the laugh being against myself.

* * * * * *

What more is there to be told? My readers can imagine. I lost no time in wooing, and when I returned to England in the early spring, after a hard campaign among New York gaieties and New York belles, I did not undertake the voyage alone.

Yes the little mouse was mine, and a real bona fide plain gold ring, glittering upon the taper finger, told of her promise 'to love, honor and obey.' I had now a right to linger by the side of that recumbent form, as she lay among her cushions in the state room, (it was too cold and stormy for promenades on deck) no jealous fears of laughing Irishmen or gabbling Germans coming to disturb my peace, as heretofore.

We had a long tedious passage, and my darling little wife looked very pale and wearied when we at last steamed into the noble Mersey,—so much so, that I carried her away out of sight even of my father and Joe, till a few days quietude brought back her strength and color; and then she filled our old dull bachelor sanctum with light and sunshine.

The governor wanted us to make up our abode with him altogether, telling me my voyage to America seemed only to have led me out of one difficulty into another; to which I retorted that, if it had, they were both in a matter-o'money. Barbarous pun! but it amused the old gentleman immensely. However my business arrangements in New York had been settled so satisfactorily,—the firm of "Stanton & Sons" again holding their heads very far 'above water'—that I was ambitious to set up a separate establishment; so Anna (or "Mousie, as I best loved to call her,) and myself forthwith commenced house-hunting.

I will not tell you the exact spot we fixed upon, as it might involve more notoriety than would be agreeable; suffice it to say, the windows of our abode command a fine view of Birkenhead Park, (that lovely design of the late Joseph Paxton,) on and over Bidston and its observatory, till a sparkle of water in the sunlight looks like a thread of silver in the far-away horizon, forming a bright connecting link between earth and heaven; and if any of my readers are clever enough to find us out, I can only promise them a warm welcome, and any further particulars they may desire concerning myself, my wife, or my voyage to New York.

SHADE TREES.—It is a great mistake to permit shade trees to stand so near together that none have room for proper development. Young trees may be placed near each other to prevent awkward gaps, but as they increase in size the superfluous ones should be removed, and the remaining ones will show they are the gainers. A celebrated fruit grower said it took him thirty years to acquire the moral courage necessary to thin out his fruit buds properly. A still higher degree of courage is required to lay to a thrifty, handsome shade tree, though we know its neighbors will be dwarfed if it is allowed to remain.

Ayer's
Cherry Pectoral,
For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping-Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Among the great discoveries of modern science, few are of more real value to mankind than this effectual remedy for all diseases of the Throat and Lungs. A vast trial of its virtues, throughout this and other countries, has shown that it does surely and effectually control them. The testimony of our best citizens, of all classes, establishes the fact, that CHERRY PECTORAL will and does relieve and cure the afflicting disorders of the Throat and Lungs beyond any other medicine. The most dangerous affections of the Pulmonary Organs yield to its power; and cases of Consumption, cured by this preparation, are publicly known, so remarkable as hardly to be believed, were they not proven beyond dispute. As a remedy it is adequate, on which the public may rely for full protection. By curing Coughs, the forerunners of more serious disease, it saves unnumbered lives, and an amount of suffering not to be computed. It challenges trial, and convinces the most sceptical. Every family should keep it on hand as a protection against the early and unperceived attacks of Pulmonary Affections, which are easily met at first, but which become incurable, and too often fatal, if neglected. Tender lungs need this defence; and it is unwise to be without it. As a safeguard to children, amid the distressing diseases which beset the Throat and Chest of childhood, CHERRY PECTORAL is invaluable; for, by its timely use, multitudes are rescued from premature graves, and saved to the love and affection centred on them. It acts speedily and surely against ordinary colds, securing sound and health-restoring sleep. No one will suffer troublesome Influenza and painful Bronchitis, when they know how easily they can be cured.

Originally the product of long, laborious, and successful chemical investigation, no cost or toil is spared in making every bottle in the utmost possible perfection. It may be confidently relied upon as possessing all the virtues it has ever exhibited, and capable of producing cures as memorable as the greatest it has ever effected.

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS ON THE LATE ELECTIONS.

When we see the great city of New York deliberately voting to be put back under the rule of Tammany, it must be admitted that even the cause of common honesty does not appear to be highly popular. We probably have before us a stormy era, in which many questions which the people imagined were finally settled will be dealt with anew, and in a way well calculated to surprise the world. The legislation which has been carried out since the war, on questions of finance, reconstruction, and the negro, and the constitutional amendments of the same period, are not beyond the reach of a Democratic majority in Congress and the country. The history of the rebellion and its consequences is by no means completed. For the sake of the country it is hoped that the Democrats will use their victory in a spirit of moderation and prudent statesmanship. We doubtless see to-day the Democratic Presidential candidate for 1876; and if the Republican party is not conducted with greater wisdom and good fortune during the next two years than it has been during the last two, Mr. Tilden is the most probable successor of Gen. Grant.

The New York Herald says "General Grant who led the Republican party into power two years ago with the largest majority, perhaps, ever given to a President, may feel this morning, as he reads the returns of the November elections, that he has been like the prodigal son, and has squandered a precious political inheritance. Whatever the causes, the result is decisive, New York, which has been anchored so firmly to the Republican party, now swings out in pronounced and irretrievable revolt. Even the splendid popularity of Governor Dix could not save the administration.

The election is not merely a victory, but a revolution. The United States pronounces in favor of conservative purposes. We are weary of war and its bloody instructions. The practical lessons to be learned cannot fail to be of the very gravest importance. The canvass closed the political career of General Grant.

The Boston "Advertiser" (Ind. Rep.) thus expresses itself in regard to the result in Massachusetts: But a part of the falling off, and not a small part was directly owing to causes for which the administration is responsible. Outside of all considerations of popularity or fitness of candidates, the Republicans would not vote in any way that could be construed as an indorsement of the means by which the adminstration has made its power felt in Massachusetts. They have had severe experience of what it costs to be loyal to party during the last twelve months. They have seen the power of organization passing into the control of men for whom the people have no respect. They have seen important Federal offices in this State manipulated for private ends, in violation of the rules of the civil service, and in studied contempt of their advice and judgment. They have seen the party machinery taken possession of by the recipients of Executive favor and used to fortify themselves in their position and to intimidate all candidates for office who would not affiliate with them. The scheme of allying the party with the temperance question has been tried, and it has failed disastrously. Voters thought the time had come to say that they did not care to continue the farce any longer.

A reduction of the aggregate Republican vote for Congressmen by 40,000 or 50,000, and a loss of the majority of the delegation is the only answer it was in their power to make to what they have long looked upon as a grave misuse of Executive patronage. The defeat of some of our members of Congress is to be deeply regreted, but it is the price we have to pay for what we devoutly trust will result in the political regeneration of the Commonwealth.

The New York "Tribune" (General Grumbler) sees in the result a direct blow at the administration. It says; The verdict of the country against Grantism is delivered. There were only two great questions before the people at this election. One was whether the administration deserves the public confidence, and the other was whether it ought to be perpetuated. They have both been answered in the negative so loudly that even the President must hear the verdict.

It is not anywhere a mere Democratic victory. It is the protest of all classes of citizens against an administration which supported Jayne, which enriched Sanborn, which lobbied the Salary bill through Congress, which established its Kelloggs in the South by perjured judges and misused bayonets, and tried to sustain them by slandering an injured people, and which had just put itself forward with the insolent claim for a perpetuation of power. The public had grown weary of six years of rule remarkable for nothing but blundering and greed. The demand for an indefinite extension of such misrule was too much for good nature. It needed the sharp answer it has received. This is the end of Grantism. It is not the revival of the rebellion nor the definitive rehabilitation of the Democratic party. It simply eliminates Grantism from politics as an impertinent factor, and leaves the two parties confronted—so evenly matched that both must hereafter be careful to make no mistakes. The future belongs to the one who shall earn it.

A WALKING ADVERTISEMET.

LIMESTONE SPRINGS, S. C.

DR. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.:

Dear Sir—I am a walking advertisement, for your Golden Medical Discovery Purgtive Pellets and Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, they having cured me of Catarrh of nine years' standing which was so bad that it disfigured my nose, and while curing it, your medicines also cured me of Asthma in its worst and most aggravated from. Before using your meicines I had become reduced in flesh from one hundred and fifty-five to one hundred and fifteen pounds, and I now weigh one hundred and sixty-two pounds, and am in better health than I have enjoyed for twenty years.

Yours truly,
J. L. LUMSDEN.

The above is but a fair sample of hundreds of letters which are received by Dr. Pierce, and in the face of such evidence who can longer doubt that the Dr's medicines cure the worst cases of Chronic Catarrh.

The Great Favorite with the Ladies

Wm. Forsyth Byman & Son druggists, of Live Oak, Fla., write, Sept. 16th, 1874, as follows: "DR. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.—Your Golden Medical Discovery and Purgative Pellets sell very largely and give complete satisfaction, as numbers of our customers and friends testify with pleasure. Your Favorite Perscription is indeed the great Favorite with the ladies and numbers can say with joy that it has saved them from eking out a miserable life or meeting with premature death, and restored them to health and happiness."

Thousands of women bless the day on which Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription was first made known to them. A single bottle often gives delicate and suffering women more relief than months of treatment from their family physician. In all those derangements causing back-ache dragging down sensatons, nervous and general debilty, it is a sovereign remedy. Its soothing and healing properties render it of the utmost value to the ladies suffering from internal fever, congestion, inflamation or ulceration, and its strengthening effects tend to correct displacements of internal parts, the result of weakness of natural support. It is sold by all druggist.

Dr. Pierce's pamphlet on Diseases peculiar to Women will be sent to any address on receipt of two stamps. Address as above.

FINANCE AND TRADE.

GOLD 1.10¼

Money is active in the cities and the rates for call loans have been as high as 4 per cent during the week. The rest in gold with a corresponding advance in interest rates, would indicate a firmer feeling in the way of business.

The organization of a Corn Exchange in the City of Pittsburgh has brought about an investigation, by the dealers of that city into freight charges of the Pennsylvania railroad on grain to and from that city, as compared with through rates from the shipping cities of the West to the interior and sea board towns of the East. The developments thus far add nothing new to the known policy of the great monopoly, of charging more on local, than on throuth frieghts. The people of the interior have felt this unjust discrimination, ever since the road was organized, and had the representatives incorporate a provision in the new constitution, which itwas thought, would compel a compliance to their wishes all of which is regarded by the Pennsylnania Railroad Co, as so much chaff. The result of the late election, should be a warning to the railroad monopolies. When a party, like the great Republican party, has been virtually wiped out in a day, for disregarding the wishes of the people, although it had the whole government of the United States to back it, is it not time for the corporations to pause and reflect, lest they wake up some morning and find themselves bowing to the will of a merciful people, asking "what shall I do to be saved." We copy the following from the Pittsburgh Commercial.

DIFFERENCES IN FREIGHT RATES.

The rate on grain from Chicago to Pittsburgh in car lots is 25c per hundred. From Chicago to Philadelphia and Baltimore the rate is 35c and in Chicago the officials of the Pennsylvania road advertise that they will carry grain to the points named below at the Philadelphia rate of 35c per hundred. Taking, then, the fourth-class rate from Pittsburgh to interior towns and adding to it the 25c paid on the grain brought there will give a figure showing what Pittsburgh merchants have to pay, and a comparison will show the difference between the charges on the same transportation to the Pittsburgh grain trade, and to Chicago grain dealers. The following table gives the rate charged to Pittsburgh grain dealers, on grain delivered to certain points, from Chicago, and the difference between these rates and the 35c charged on grain bought of Chicago dealers, and consigned directly to these points—constituting a discrimination against Pittsburgh:

Points of Delivery.	Pittsburgh rate per cwt.	Chicago rate per cwt	Discrimination against Pittsburgh per cwt.
Lancaster	48c	35c	13
Adamsburg	60c	35	25
Sunbury	68	35	33

Eagleville	65	35	30
Osceola	58	35	23
Phillipsburg	60	35	25
York	58	35	22

We reproduce these figures to show our farmer readers of Centre Co. what they, as well as shippers, who buy their grain, have to contend with. The rate of freights from Chicago to Philadelphia, on grain, is thirty-five cents per hundred pounds. Bellefonte to Philadelphia it is thirty cents per hundred pounds. In addition to this we mention the three great Railroad Presidents, Vanderbilt of the New York Central, Jewett of the Erie and Scott of Pennsylvania have visited recently Baltimore to confer with Garrett of the Baltimore and his road, for the purpose of making a combination that will enable all the trunk lines to raise their through rates, to which the Baltimore and Ohio refuse to exceed. The other companies threaten to make the rates so low, that the Baltimore and Ohio will be compelled to join them or carry grain at a loss. With this understanding or misunderstanding, we may expect to see grain carried through our state at less rates per bushel then the same company will carry it from points, or states in the interior, to the sea board. This being the outlook the prospect of the Centre county grain trade is anything but flattering, and we must await future developments to enable us to get at the real situation.

Grain and Flour Markets.

BELLEFONTE, Nov. 18th, 1874.

Wheat is in moderate supply at the mills, and the price is barely maintained at our quotations. It is a fact worthy of note that the price of wheat has ruled from five to ten cents per bushel higher for several weeks past in Bellefonte than has been paid in any other market accessable to Centre county farmers. The bulk of the supply of oats and old corn continues to come from the West at our quotations.

Philadelphia Market Report.
Monday, Nov. 16, 1874.

REMARKS—The aggregate business since our last report has somewhat increased, and as the election is now over, an animated state of affairs is confidently anticipated for the balance of the year. The future is full of promise and financial and commercial affairs throughout the country are undoubtedly destined to work into a better position. The aggregate mercantile indebtedness of the country has been reduced to a much smaller amount than for many years past, and the Spring cannot open without giving evidence of a revival of prosperity.

WHEAT—The receipts have been quite moderate, and mostly for direct shipment. Prime Red and Amber have been in good demand at better prices, but of these descriptions the offerings have been light. Inferior grades are very dull, and can only be put off at low and irregular figures. Sales of 8,000 bus Western Red, good and prime, at $1.18a1.23; 21,000 bus Western Amber at $1,22a1.26; 2,500 bus Michigan Amber at $1,25a1.29; 2 000 bus Delaware do at $1.25; 1,800 bus Michigan White at $1,27a1.37; and 400 bus Illinois White at $1,35. 24,000 bus were shipped to Antwerp per Vaderland, and 10,000 bus to Liverpool per Illinois. Receipts for the week, 48,100 bus.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE.

Notices of the Press.

The ever increasing circulation of this excellent monthly proves its continued adaptation to popular desires and needs. Indeed, when we think into how many homes it penetrates every month, we must consider it as one of the educators as well as entertainers of the public mind, for its vast popularity has been won by no appeal to stupid prejudices or depraved tastes.—Boston Globe.

The character the Magazine possesses for variety, enterprise, artistic wealth, and literary culture that has kept pace with, if it has not led the times, should cause its conductors to regard it with justifiable complacency. How to Have Good Cider.

Prof. Horsford, of Harvard University, has published a receipt for improving and preserving cider, by means of which the progress of the vinous and acetic fermentations may be arrested at pleasure, and the cider preserved in just such a state as may be desired. It is this:

"Put the new cider into clean casks or barrels, and allow it to ferment from one to three weeks, according as the weather is warm or cool. When it has attained to lively fermentation add to each gallon three-fourths of a pound of white sugar, and let the whole ferment again until it possesses nearly the brisk pleasant taste which it is desirable should be permanent. Pour out a quart of the cider and mix it with one quarter of an ounce of sulphite of lime for every gallon the cask contains. Stir it until it is intimately mixed, and pour the emulsion into the liquid. Agitate the contents of the cask thoroughly for a few moments, then let it rest that the cider may settle. Fermentation will be arrested at once, and will not be resumed. It may be bottled in the course of a few weeks, or it may be allowed to remain in the cask and used on draught. If bottled, it will become a sparkling cider of surpassing excellence."

Professor Horseford was the first to use the sulphite of lime for this purpose, and to him is due the credit of first calling attention to its usefulness. It is in no respect deleterous, as the sulphite, into which the sulphate is changed by the liberation of sulphurous acid, is entirely insoluble, and remains at the bottom of the vessel. Remember, it is the sul*phite* of lime, not sulph*ate*, must be used.

The quality of the cider will remain unchanged for years.

Pasture Lands.

X. A. Willard, the great dairyman, is opposed to breaking up pasture lands unless they are very weedy; but his experience has been in the dairy region proper, more natural to grass-growing than to cereal crops. In the grain-growing region of western New York, where pastures suffer much from drought, they become sward-bound, and in some places the grass dies out It is true that the drainage and top-dressing with rich manure will long compensate for the lack of rain, but the disposition to sward-bind in a corn-growing climate will in a very few seasons diminish the pasturage, and the only way to renew it is by breaking up and reseeding after the sod has been rotted in the growth of either a corn or other cereal or potato crop. Then if seeded with timothy and clover a large hay crop may be cut, and if kept for pasturage the timothy will soon be run out by the Northern blue grass (Poa pratensis;) but the clover, if suffered to seed the land, will be as perennial as the same grass; yet there are thousands of acres of pasture lands in western New York which only need the under-drains and little top-dressing with manure to become more profitable as pasture lands than for grain-growing.

Feeding Wheat to Horses.

Feeding wheat to horses in some portions of the West, is by no means uncommon. A writer in the Prairie Farmer, living in St. Clair county, Illinois, says that six acres of wheat are sown there to one of corn, as the latter is a very uncommon crop, and that while wheat sells at $1 per bushel, corn brings 75 cents, thus, regarding the product of both, wheat is the cheaper article to feed; but what is rather surprising, it causes the horses to sweat more than corn The way it is prepared for feeding, is to put it in a barrel and add water so as to cover it six inches, and let it remain for thirty six hours, by which time it becomes soft and sometimes even sprouts. It is generally fed with cut straw, in feeds commencing with two quarts of the wheat to four quarts. At the beginning the animals do not take readily to it, but gradually grow to like it, and work upon it as well as upon corn. Oats are very little used there.

WANAMAKER AND BROWN'S

ENORMOUS ESTABLISHMENT,

Making its Annual Sales more than $3,000,000!!!

BY MERITING and SECURING the Patronage of all classes of the Community to a degree never before enjoyed by ANY one House in any department of trade!!! Sure to commend itself and be commended

BY ALL THOUGHTFUL FOLK,

Because advantageous alike to both buyer and seller.

EXPLANATION AND ELABORATION

OF WANAMAKER & BROWN'S NEW PLAN.

1st POINT. "CASH." Houses doing a credit business must provide for losses on bad debts, interest on long-standing accounts, capital locked up, etc. To bear such losses themselves would drive them out of business. Therefore a per cent. is added to the price of each article sold, to cover this leakage, and Cash Buyers whether they know it or not, really pay the bad debts and the interest on the long credits of the other customers!! Under the Cash Payment system one pays only for what he gets, and contributes nothing to a "Sinking Fund."

By this Radical Change we shall lose some of our customers no doubt, but we will gain ten where we lose one, the advantages being so great to all who can avail themselves of them. So we say

CASH THROUGHOUT.

Bring Money for Clothing, and we will supply it at prices possible under no other plan.

2d POINT. "ONE PRICE." The fairness of this feature of our plan all will praise. It is simply treating all alike—exacting nothing from indisposition to bargain or ignorance, and, at the same time, conceding all that shrewdness on the shrewdest customer's part could possibly extort, because the "One Price" which we mark on our goods, shall invariably be

NOT the "First" Price, but the LAST and LOWEST PRICE.
NOT the "TOP" Price, but the VERY BOTTOM PRICE.

In other words, Salesmen or "Headmen," have never been allowed, under ordinary circumstances, to fall below a certain figure! It is at that, or at a lower figure that we now determine to mark our goods, calculating the cost to the exact penny, and fixing the price at the low minimum profit on which business on a large scale can be conducted.

We know that the larger business we aim for and anticipate, will require a large increase in the number of customers, and we shall therefore see to it that the "One Price" is based on the Smallest Profit, calculated to the exact and lowest penny, which will not be difficult to do with universal Cash Payment for the rule. The price will be marked in plain figures and no alteration allowed.

NOTE.—Whenever the exigencies of the season, the state of trade, or the money market may demand, the right is reserved to go through our stock before or after business hours and mark down any lot or lots of goods, changing the figures on all the labels, so that the new rates are the same to all, and all buy alike at the mark down prices.

WANAMAKER & BROWN WILL NEVER HOLD THEIR GOODS.

3d POINT. "Full Guarantee." A printed Guarantee, bearing the signature of our firm, will accompany each garment as a Warrantee. This binds us in every sense, and will be honored as quickly as a good draft of the Government of the United States. This is a sample of the Full Guarantee, and tells its own story:

GUARANTEE.

We hereby guarantee
1st. That the prices of our goods shall be as low as the same quality of material and manufacture are sold anywhere in the United States.
2d. That the prices are precisely the same to everybody for same quality, on same day of purchase.
3d. That the quality of goods is as represented on printed labels.
4th. That the full amount of cash paid will be refunded, if customers find the articles unsatisfactory, and return them unworn and uninjured within 10 days of date of purchase.

[Signed,] WANAMAKER & BROWN,
OAK HALL,
Sixth and Market Streets, Phila.

DATE,

4th POINT. "Cash Returned." This is simply a concession on our part to our customers, to secure them full confidence in dealing for goods they know very little about, and we thus prevent any occasion for dissatisfaction from any and every cause whatsoever. If the garment is not exactly what you thought, if your taste changes, if the "home folks" prefer another color or another shape, if you find you can buy the same material and style elsewhere for less money, if you conclude you don't need it after you get home, if the season changes suddenly and you wish you had not bought it, bring it back unworn and uninjured, and the full amount of money you paid will be returned on the spot. What more can we do for our customers than this, when we make our clothing so that they can draw the money value with it equally as well as with a check on the bank?

THE ADVANTAGES

incident to a system having for its cardinal points these which we have now explained, are simply innumerable. Saving of time and temper, perfect security, absence of all huckstering, &c., &c., &c., &c. But above all this

Sinking the prices several degrees below what they have been heretofore, or could possibly be under the old system.

By dispensing with certain clerks no longer needed, it reduces "Store Expenses."
By enforcing CASH Payments, the bad debts are avoided.
By putting plenty of ready money in hand, it enables us to buy goods at figures that credit men know nothing about.
By increase of sales, a smaller profit on each article is sufficient.

All of these "By-Ways" lead direct to and this without lowering the quality or style of our Celebrated make of Men's and Boys' Clothing.

Our warehouses, comprising 27 spacious rooms, are stocked to the full our home mills have been turning out large quantities of goods to us that are now in store, and Foreign fabrics by the ship load, are now on our counters. Our workmen have been a small army, and as diligent and skillful as they are numerous. With the improvements already noted, there are also new styles, new colors, new cuts and more careful finishing. Everything possible has been done to meet and gratify the rush, and now

MEDICAL.

CHEROKEE REMEDY.

THE GREAT INDIAN DIURETIC.
INFINITELY SUPERIOR TO BUCHU.

Nine tenths of the human family suffer, directly or indirectly, at one time or other, from diseases or irregularities of the generative system, while the victims of indiscretion, and of quack treatment, are comparatively numerous.

The idea that patients cannot treat themselves successfully in these cases, has long ago been exploded. A good and reliable medicine, prepared by an experienced physician, from the original Indian Recipe, that is guaranteed to effect a can be as safely relied upon as the prescription of the most skillful practitioner. Such a medicine is the celebrated

CHEROKEE REMEDY.

Full directions accompany each bottle, and if they are carefully followed, a quick and permanent cure is guarranteed. Price $2.00 per bottle.

THE CHEROKEE INJECTION, should always be used in conjunction with the Remedy for both incipient and obstinate cases of Gonorrhœa. Price $2.00 per bottle.

CHEROKEE CURE

for seminal weakness (spermatorrhœa), is a simple vegetable medicine that was used for many years in the practice of the physician who first gave the remedy to the public. It has effected cures that would scarcely be credited except on ocular evidence of the fact. Full directions, with pamphlet containing all particulars of symptoms, treatment, &c., accompany each bottle. Price $2.00 per bottle. Sold everywhere.

CHEROKEE PILLS.

These Pill are prepared expressly for the cure of those irregularities to which ladies are subject, and will be found safe, reliable and effectual, for the cure of Suppression, Green Sickness, Pain in the Back, Hysteria, Sick Headache, &c., &c. Price $1.00 per box.

Heimstreet's Hair Restorative,

OR INIMITABLE HAIR COLORING.

NOT A DYE.—Heimstreet's "Hair Coloring is not a Dye, and its operation is not by any chemical effect, but by a natural restoration of the glands, thus giving the hair the color it originally had.

NATURALNESS.—When the hair is dyed, its color is leaden hued and unnatural, but when restored by HEIMSTREET'S HAIR COLORING, its appearance is so perfectly natural that no one can detect the use of any Restorative.

STAINLESS.—While the Restorative acts promptly on the hair, it leaves no stain or mark whatever on the skin. It is composed of ingredients that form a perfect dressing as well as a coloring, so that no oils, &c., are necessary.

THIS MOST EFFECTIVE of all the Hair Restorers is for sale by all druggists at 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle. Numerous certificates from those who have used it are in the possession of the proprietors.

PARK'S BALSAM

OR

WILD CHERRY AND TAR.

BALSAM.—Nothing is more soothing to the irritated membranes than the pure BALSAMS of which this medicine is composed.

WILD CHERRY.—The true bark of Wild Cherry is an unfailing specific for all throat and pectorial diseases.

TAR.—The wonderful healing properties of Tar when united with the other ingredients, render PARK'S BALSAM the most efficient Cough Medicine ever offered to the public.

CONSUMPTION.—The many cases of Consumption that have been cured justify us in the assertion that it is the very best medicine for that disease ever discovered.

CERTIFICATES OF CURES.

STEPHEN FISK, of New York, says his daughter had consumption, and terbucles had formed in her lungs. He was induced to try Park's Balsam, which effected a speedy cure.

T. EDWARD FLEET, of Brooklyn says, I think it is the best medicine for affections of the lungs I ever used.

G. S. FANCHER, of New York says, I feel fully persuaded that Park's Balsam has saved my life.

We have in our possession hundreds of certificates from others, and all of the same cheering import. Price 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle. Sold by druggists and dealers everywhere.

EGYPTIAN
Rat and Vermin Destroyer

FOR EXTERMINATING RATS, MICE, WATER BUGS, ROUCHES, RED ANTS, &c.

STRENGTH.—When a Rat tastes the Egyptian Destroyer, his death warrant is signed, sure. It cannot fail to kill. It also creates great thirst, and the rat will search for water out of doors, and not die in his hole, to cause a stench that cannot be got out.

ATTRACTIVENESS.—Rats are the shrewdest of vermin. It is hard to get them to eat poison. An ingredient in the Egyption Destroyer is a perfect bait, and they are attracted rather than freightened be it. "Rats (no children) cry for it.

KEEPING SOFT.—People know how the ordinary Rat Pastes dry up and become useless, causing annoyance and loss. The Egyptian Destroyer is fully warranted to keep soft fresh and effective in any climate for years.

SURE DEATH.—The Egyptian Destroyer kills every time. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials are now in the hands of the proprietors, substantiating its great merits as the best preparation for destroying Vermin in the world. Be sure and ask for the "Egyptian," and take no other.

Put up in large glass bottles. Price, 25 cts. Sold by Druggists everywhere.

MEDICAL.

Wright's Rejuvenating Elixer.

For the restoration of Nature's forces. It gives new life and vigor to the aged, and causes the blood of youth to course through the veins. It effectually cures Impotency, Palpitation of the Heart, Loss of Muscular Power, Low Spirits, Disorganization of the Generative Organs, and all the train of ills that follow in the path of the transgressor of Nature's laws. Price $2 per bottle.

It will be readily understood that in the brief space afforded by the advertising columns of a public print, it is impossible to give all particulars of the diseases that may be cured by the CHEROKEE MEDICINES. That they are destined to become immensely popular is plainly obvious in consequence of their

GREAT INTRINSIC MERIT.

The pamphlet and circulars that accompany the medicines give all the information which cannot be given here, and the remedies may be had of any respectable druggist.

AT PRIVATE SALE.

A valuable farm containing 215 acres, situate within one mile of Milesburg, and three miles of Bellefonte, at the junction of the Bald Eagle Valley and Snow Shoe railroads, near the depot, Schools, Churches, Post office, Mills, etc. The lands are FREE from STONE, level, well fenced, and under a good state of cultivation. A valuable vein of

LIME STONE ROCK

is on the farm, and a village is growing up around it, which gives a fair prospect of an increase in value before long. The Philipsburg turnpike runs through it for a distance of ¾ of a mile rendering a large strip on each side available for house lots, from which the entire price of the farm might be realized, lots having sold heretofore for $100 apiece. The farm is well watered, having water in all the fields, good wells at the house and barn with pumps all in good order. There also are 50 acres of good

PINE AND OAK TIMBER.

The land has a southern exposure and is therefore very early. There are two houses on the farm, both facing the turnpike. One containing five rooms on the first floor with Hall and five on the second and back Kitchen, with room over-head. Connected with this house is a good log barn, ice house and other out buildings. On the other side of the road is the other house containing eight rooms with good barn and out buildings. This farm could be divided into two parts, and will be if purchasers so desire, making one containing 130 acres with the large house, and the other containing 36 acres with the small house. ELAINE

AS AN ILLUMINATOR.

WHY IT IS THE SAFEST.

ELAINE will not explode while burning in a lamp, nor in any other way, as it does not contain any of the explosive compounds so frequently met with in the ordinary oil for illuminating. A lamp, filled with ELAINE, if upset or accidently broken, will not explode or burn. There is no position in which you can put a lamp filled with ELAINE, for common use, in which it will explode. As no other illuminator has such advantages of safety, ELAINE IS CERTAINLY THE SAFEST FAMILY ILLUMINATING OIL KNOWN.

Bellefonte and County.

——Thanksgiving one week from to-morrow.

——Court commences next Monday and will continue two weeks.

——Judge Orvis is holding court in Lewisburg, Union Co., this week.

——The "Opera" cigar sold by James Welch is now all the rage, nothing like it, and five cents. 40-tf

——Major Geo. N. Hale, student at the Columbia Law School, was at home a few days last week.

——A "village camp meeting" has been in progress for some weeks in the M. E. church, this place.

——It is really true that Bob. Flemming, the Lock Haven lumberman, has joined the Tammany Ring.

——P. Gray Meek positively assures us that his eyes were not injured, looking for Democratic majorities.

——George H. Weaver, Esq., our efficient overseer of the poor, has many applications for charity now a days.

——Have street pedestrians no rights that a housekeeper is bound to respect when engaged in washing her front door steps?

——We have been having sore eyes ever since the Reporter said we had been appointed private secretary to B. F. Butler.

——Running one legislative candidate in a district entitled to two, is like rubbing a man's nose with goose greece to cure him of consumption.

——Our over the way contemporary think FredKurtz's liver must be out of order. That's likely as it couldn't possibly be his brains.—Watchman.

Why?

——And now a grocer up town says if the President wants us to observe Thanksgiving he must furnish the eggs. Just as if the President could lay eggs.

——Don't forget the S. S. Institute, at Martha Furnace Baptist church on Friday. A number of Sabbath School workers from Bellefonte will be there.

——In reference to the trouble existing between the editor of the Watchman and the Court House ring, we would re—— Who made that noise?—Who threw that stone?

——The Watchman contained an article last week advising the public to be careful what they eat. A more interesting subject would be "Where can we get enough to eat."

——And still the wonder grows. Simon Wolfe, the store keeper at Centre Hall now receives letters addressed, Hon. S. S. Wolfe! What wonderful effects a little bit of an election has on some people.

——A Williamsport editor got so terribly inebriated in celebrating over the election returns, that he hoisted a very domestic and motherly looking hen at the head of his paper with the following superscription: "Now crow, old cock."

——The Gazette & Bulletin says the results of the election show "foul dealings." Too true; but we are waiting for the day when fowl dealings will be palatable to the stomach of both parties. We have our eye on a prospective Thanksgiving dinner.

——In S. A. Brew & Son's Grocery Store may be seen a mangel-wurzel that weighs 14 pounds and 6 ounces. It was raised by Col. Shortlidge, who raised 195 bushels, of the vegetable off three-sixteenths of an acre which is at the rate of 1040 bushels to the acre.

——The Watchman inquires, "Has anybody heard anything about any southern outrages, since the election?" We think not, but the newspapers have been full of accounts of northern outrages. Just think. Butler, Mann, and lots of other fellows have been shamefully outraged.

——The Watchman editor says that "the dead Cæsar is lying at the base of the third term." There has always been some doubt among antiquarians as to the exact locality of Cæsar's grave, but now the mystery steps down and out. Everybody knows that the office of the New York Herald has always been the base of the third term. But how Cæsar happened to select such a resting place is wonderful. No wonder that paper blows so much about Cæsarism

Something of an Adventure.—Two young men left Bellefonte a few evenings since on a visit to Brush Valley. The object was a young lady, a good time, and a trip. They arrived; conferred with each other, an arrangement was made; one of the young men put up at a hotel and the other drove off to see his inamorata. After the blissful greetings that weeks of absence lend to such occasions, the young man suggests a pleasure ride. The inamorata is willing because her father will soon be home, and he is down on her having beaux. An hour afterwards they drove into Millheim and stopped at the principal hotel. The landlord fearing that all was not exactly in accordance with the law and the prophets, refused to harbor them and they continued their journey to Aaronsburg. Here they found better hotel accommodations and had their horse put up, and, registering themselves as man and wife, ordered supper and a room. They ate supper, and, shortly after, retired. In the meantime the girl's father came home, heard what had taken place, mounted a horse and started in pursuit. He followed them to Millheim, heard that they had driven through, and continued the pursuit. Arriving at Aaronsburg, he proceeded to the hotel asked the landlord if the parties he was in search of were there, and, receiving an affirmative answer, demanded that he should be shown to their room. He rapped long and loudly at the door but received no response from within, when, in tones of thunder, he demanded that the door should be opened inside of eight seconds or he'd burst it through. This threat accomplished the desired end, and the young lothario made his appearance. It was shocking, the way they both were scared. But the half has not been told nor the scare half completed. The enraged father seized the young man and administered to him one of the most thorough and successful floggings he ever received. He spared no pains to make a lasting impression on the young man and he succeeded. It was not a brutal assault, but a plain, old-fashioned thrashing, such as have a tendency to give a romantic young man a feeling appreciation of the stern realities of life. Then he told them to stay there just a few minutes and he'd go across the street to a Justice's and get a warrant and have the young man arrested. While he was gone the excited couple hastened with all dispatch to array themselves, get their horse and buggy hitched up and get away from the clutches of the old man and the law. Just as they were getting into the buggy the enemy appeared on the other side of the street armed with his warrant. He intercepted them, caught the horse by the head and demanded that they should get out. Now came the conflict. The young man was cornered. Still smarting from the effects of his recent castigation, he became desperate. He jumped from the buggy, seized some stones and told the enemy that he would kill him if he didn't leave that horse go. But the enemy was not easily intimidated and retained a firm hold on the bridle. The neighbors, alarmed by the unusual noise and loud talk, gathered 'round in dozens, to see the row. The young man threatened and the old man held the horse. At length the youngster's forbearance gave out, and he hurled the stones at the enemy's head thick and swift, until finally a rock struck him on the head and he fell to the ground. Then the young man jumped into the buggy, gave the whip to the horse and galloped out of town and danger. He took the source of his infelicities home and returned to Bellefonte a wiser but a crippled man. Whether the outraged father will continue his persecutions, remains to be seen. We withhold the names of the parties for prudential reasons, but the facts as above related are painfully correct.

——Abram Sussman, the well known leather and seed dealer, has removed his store to No. 2 Bush's Arcade. His supply of leather and unequaled variety of trunks was never equaled before in Centre County. Cash paid for green hides. He also deals in clover and timothy seeds. These branches of industry have been pursued by Mr. Sussman for many years, and there is no man in the state that understands the business better than he. Having removed into larger and more commodious quarters, he proposes to extend and enlarge his trade, and all persons dealing in his line will find it advantageous to call and examine his stock and prices.

Wonderful Success.—Three years ago Dr. Boshee's German Syrup was introduced in the United States from Germany for the cure of Coughs, severe Colds settled on the breast, Consumption and other diseases of the Throat and Lungs. No medicine ever had such a success, 300,000 sample bottles have been distributed every year for three years by druggists in all parts of the United States, and nearly 1000 letters from druggists are now on our files, saying that no other preparation in their stores sells as well and gives such excellent satisfaction. All we ask is for you to go to your druggist, F. Potts Green, and get a sample bottle for 10 cents and try it; regular size 75 cents.

——James Welch is the only agent for the sale of the celebrated "Opera" cigar in Bellefonte. 40-tf

——We had a visit on Saturday from the bulk of the population of Williamsport; viz., Pete Herdic.

——A new bank is to be started at Tyrone and three Bellefonte gentlemen will furnish half the capital.

——Captain Isaac Lythe, was released on bail, at Williamsport last Wednesday and has been at home ever since.

——P. G. Meek, Esq., was in Clearfield on Saturday last fixing up the pins for a seat in the State Senate, should W. A. Wallace be promoted.

——The Lock Haven Enterprise heads its local page with this suggestive caption: "Local Dashes" but they are not as a general thing, just the suddenest dashes we ever saw.

——The Enterprise is publishing a history of Clinton County. The initial chapters are well written and we have no doubt this enterprise will add largely to their subscription list.

——We had the pleasure on Saturday of meeting Mr. W. G. Comeford, late of the Howard Iron Works, but at present General Superintendent of the Mt. Vernon Iron Works in Virginia.

——Harry Bigler, James P. Hale and Jack Irvin all of Clearfield County spent several days in town last week. They attended a ratification meeting at Moses Thompson, Esq's. on Thursday evening.

——Col. Shugert, C. Curtin, F. Potts Green and the venerable P. B. Wilson are booked for New Orleans and the Grand Encampment of Knights Templar. They leave on the 25th of this month.

——Major Wilson is going to New Orleans. He wants to hear Miss Kellogg sing. She's been making such a fuss there of late, that the President has sent down some troops, and established her in a government of her own, and the Major, of course, wants to see her once more before the footlights.

——Major R. C. Cheesman and his estimable wife, celebrated their tin wedding last evening. A host of friends were present and the evening passed away delightfully. The presents numbered everything that could be manufactured out of tin. May they live to celebrate their diamond wedding.

—— This is a good season of the year to plant shade and fruit trees, during the last week a number of maples have been planted in front of residences in town. We suggest that the Board of School Directors, plant a number of shade trees in the public school grounds.

——Mrs. Ruth Ward, assistant principal of the public schools, has been quite ill for a week or more past, and is still in a critical condition. Too much work and anxiety superinduced her sickness. We sincerely hope that she may soon be restored to health and usefulness. Her place is being temporarily supplied by Miss Mary Klinger.

——We don't like the way the Raftsman's "Journal" speaks of the seranade and reception given to Judge Orvis last week in Clearfield. The article was neither complimentary to the bench or bar, to the citizens of Clearfield, or to the editor of the "Journal." The gentleman referred to is now our Judge and the time for opposition was before, the election, not now. It seems to come with a bad grace from Mr. Row, when we remember that he was classed among Wallace's supporters, during the campaign.

——People may say what they will about the late elections but any candid and competent judge will not deny that the Post Office Book Store, owned and managed by Mr. James Welch is the most complete establishment in the county. He has the largest and choicest collection of standard and current literature; the largest stock of fine confectionery; the most elaborate supply of all manner and kinds of toys and knick-knacks. The store has become the popular resort of the ladies—in fact the ladies' exchange. Mr. Welch has just received a large supply of stock for the winter trade. His variety of goods, qualities, and prices, certainly merit an examination.

Dr. Van Valzah, whose sudden death we chronicled a week or two since is thus eulogized by a correspondent of our over-the-way cotemporary:

Dr Van Valzah was born and came to "man's estate" at Mifflinburg, Union county, where his father was a practising physician. He pursued his medical studies under the direction of his father, and was a graduate of Jefferson Medical College, of Philadelphia. After completing his course of studies, he commenced to practice at Buffalo Cross Roads, Union county, along with his grand-father, then the oldest and most experienced physician in the county. Subsequently he came to Centre county and entered into partnership with the late Dr. Samuel Strohecker, of Rebersburg. He remained with Dr. Strohecker one year, when he removed to Penns Valley and continued to live in that valley until the day of his death. In that peaceful, prosperous community for more than thirty years he led the quiet, unostentatious and useful life a country doctor—spending almost every day in administering, with intelligent mind and skillful hand, to the wants of sick and suffering humanity.

There is no disease flesh is heir to more troublesome to manage than rheumatism. It comes when you least expect it and generally remains till it gets ready to go away. The most conspicuous remedy for this complaint is Johnson's Anodyne Liniment.

Two or three doses of Sheridan's Cavalry Condition Powders will cure a horse of any common cough or cold, and the very worst cases may be cured in a few weeks. We know this from experience.

S. S. Institute.—A special session of the Centre County Sabbath School Association was held in the Fillmore M. E. church on the afternoon and evening of Friday the 13th inst. President Hamilton in the chair.

The afternoon session was opened at 2.15 by singing "Coronation," a fair attendance both of children and adults being present. After prayer by Rev. Lilly, of the Bellefonte Lutheran Congregation, Rev. Crittenden briefly addressed the S. S. children and conducted their recitation of the names, in order of the Books of the old and New Testaments and of the Ten Commandments.

The discussion of the topic, "Bible Study for adults," was opened by Gen. Beaver and continued by Prof Hamilton, Revs. Lilly and Crittenden, and Messrs. Stitzer and Keller.

Messrs. Wm. P. Tompson, Geo. Dale and Henry Lee, Supts. of the Buffalo Run, Shiloh and Fillmore Sabbath Schools, respectively, gave accounts of the workings and condition of their schools and an interesting discussion in regard to the ways and means for keeping country Sabbath Schools open during the winter followed. Mr. Crittenden conducted a recitation, illustrated by a mode of the Grinding Mill referred to in the scriptures. Afternoon session closed at 4.40 P. M. The evening session opened about 7 P. M. with a crowded house, notwithstanding which the most perfect order and attention prevailed. After singing and praying Rev. Crittenden conducted a Bible recitation illustrating a series of Bible studies for either schools or classes at private houses. Any number of questions bearing upon a given subject being presented, an answer is sought in some text of the Bible.

"Sabbath School Supplies" was discussed by Mr. Stitzer and Rev. Crittenden. The subject of "The Influence of the Sabbath-school upon the Commonwealth" was opened by Prof. Hamilton, who was followed by Mr. Stitzer, Rev. Crittenden and Prof. McKee. The topic "The secret of success in Sabbath School work" was opened by Rev. Lilly and further discussed by Mr. Keller. At 9 P. M. the exercises were closed with prayer by Prof. McKee, and the Benediction by Rev. Lilly.

The visitors were entertained with generous hospitality and all participating in the exercises seemed to realize that it was good to meet their fellow-workers in this noble cause. The next special session the 20th inst. An earnest invitation is extended to all friends of the work.

John Hamilton, Pres't.
D. S. Keller, Rec. Secretary.

——We have sent within the last week a statement of their account to every subscriber outside of Centre county, also stating the subscription price on all papers sent outside of the county will, after the first of January, 1875, be $2.15, payable strictly in advance. Under the provisions of the law which goes into effect at that time, publishers are compelled to pay postage in advance on all papers sent out of the county, and our subscribers will readily see by this arrangement that their postage is less than before, and we think no subscriber need complain at the above terms. In future all such papers will be stopped promptly at the expiration of the term of subscription unless ordered to be continued and payment received. Every subscriber can always ascertain when his time expires by reference to the date following his name on the wrapper, and a remittance mailed to us the week previous to the expiration of the time will ensure his receiving the paper without interruption. Remittances by mail should be made by P. O. order or registered letters to avoid possibility of loss.

——The occasion of the marriage of Mr. Orris L. Hoover to Miss Elmira Humes, daughter of Mr. William Humes of this place, on Thursday evening, was one of the most brilliant affairs that Bellefonte has witnessed for some time. The spacious parlors presented an enchanting appearance, and when the bridal party entered, the scene was one of rare interest and pleasure. The bride, always charming, was even more beautiful in her wedding costume and bore herself bravely through the solemn ceremony. The wedding presents were remarkable for their solidity, utility and the great number of them. The happy pair left on the evening train for Philadelphia, New York and other eastern cities. May their brightest anticipations be realized and may Heaven's richest blessings be bestowed upon them plentifully.

——These cold hazy mornings are sharp reminders of the approach of winter. One by one, almost unnoticed in their flight, the summer days have left us. The deep smoky haze of Indian summer is gradually stealing away and the dream-like appearance of autumn is freezing out. From distant wood lands sound the reports of hunters guns as they ramble in search of hare and pheasant. The autumn days are going. Everything in nature tells it to us. The brown nuts have fallen and been gathered. The mountain forests will soon be bare of leaves; the mornings and evenings are cold and raw and but a trace of summer is left in the noonday sunshine.

And so another summer has glided away. How rapidly they are leaving us!

Silently as the daylight comes when night is done, the spring and summer days of our lives are gliding away and nearer, still nearer approaches the autumn. Many of the flowers that have sprung up by the wayside are beginning to wither; the birds of our homesteads are leaving us, some to other homes on earth and some the home Beyond. Soon, too, the frosts of life will steal unawares upon us, and ere we think it, will have silvered our hair; they will nip the buds of hope, and will sever from the stem many a sweet dream now waving gracefully. Let our autumn's life be as glorious as the autumn of nature, and then with the sweet assurance of labor accomplished and ended we will be enabled to try the future; "Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch about him and lies down to peaceful dreams."

Scripture Lesson of Thanksgiving.—May be used for a "Public Bible Reading," by distributing the references on slips of paper to be read by individuals in answer to the questions to be asked by the leader.

1. Who is our example of thanksgiving?

For I have received of the Lord, that which also I delivered unto you, That the Lord Jesus, the same night in which he was betrayed, took bread:

And when he had given thanks, he brake it, and said, Take, eat: this is my body, which is broken for you: this do in remembrance of me. 1 Cor. 11. 23, 24.

2. What does David say about thanksgiving?

It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord, and to sing praises unto thy name, O Most High. Ps. 92. 1.

3. What does the prophet Isaiah say about the thanksgiving?

For the Lord shall comfort Zion: he will comfort all her waste places; and he will make her wilderness like Eden, and her desert like the garden of the Lord; joy and gladness shall be found therein, thanksgiving, and the voice of melody Isa. 51. 3.

4. What does St. Paul say to the Corinthians about thanksgiving?

For all things are for your sakes, that the abundant grace might through the thanksgiving of many redound to the glory of God. 1 Cor. 4. 15.

5. What did St. Paul say to the Phillippians about thanksgiving?

Be careful for nothing; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God. Phil. 4. 6.

6. What did St. Paul say to the Colossians about thanksgiving?

As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him:

Rooted and built up in him, and established in the faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving. Col. 2. 6. 7.

7. What does St. Paul say to Timothy about thanksgiving?

For every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused, if it be received with thanksgiving: 1 Tim. 4. 4.

8. To whom should we give thanks?

Offer unto God thanksgiving; and pay thy vows unto the Most High: Ps. 50. 14.

9. In whose name should we give thanks?

Speaking to yourselves in psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord.

Giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. Eph. 5. 19. 20.

10. In what should we give thanks?

In every thing give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you. 1 Thess. 5. 18.

What should thanksgiving always accompany?

11. How often should we give thanks?

We are bound to thank God always for you, brethren, as it is meet, because that your faith groweth exceedingly, and the charity of every one of you all toward each other aboundeth. 2 Thess. 1. 3.

12. What greatest gift demands our thanks?

Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift. 2 Cor. 9. 15.

13 Why shall we give thanks?

But thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. 1 Cor. 15. 57.

14. What example of benevolence with thanksgiving?

Then the people rejoiced, for that they offered willingly, because with perfect heart they offered willingly to the Lord: and David the king also rejoiced with great joy.

Now therefore, our God, we thank thee, and praise thy glorious name. 1 Chron. 29. 9. 13.

Praise ye the Lord. O give thanks unto the Lord; for his mercy endureth forever. Ps. 92. 1.

Hon. Alfred Armstrong.—Public Dinner and Reception in his Honor.—Fifty years ago, the Hon. Alfred Armstrong, now of Washington city, was principal of the old Academy in this place. He was a teacher of rare endowment and success. Many of the first men of the county and, indeed, of the state were students in his school. Like the venerable Kirkpatrick of Milton, his students grew up, monuments to the worth and abilities of their instructor as well as a credit to society and ornaments to the state. A public dinner was tendered Mr. Armstrong and the day appointed was Tuesday of last week, at the Bush House. An effort had been made to invite all his old students to this semi-centennial alumni-dinner, but many of them had strayed into other states and countries, some were dead and only about thirty in all gathered around the table on Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Edward C. Humes, president of the First National Bank presided. After the elaborate dinner had been completed, speeches were made by Messrs. Humes, Governor Curtin, Dr. John P. Gray, and General Beaver. In the evening a public reception was given to Mr. Armstrong in the Court House. The court room was filled with interested spectators at an early hour. The exercises were opened with prayer by Rev. W. T. Wylie after which an improvised choir composed of Messrs. E. M. Blanchard, Drs. Harris and Hibler and W. W. Montgomery, sung an old-time song which was a fitting prelude to the evening's exercises.

The reception address was delivered by Hon. James McManus, the oldest member of the Centre County bar. The address was replete with interesting reminiscences and reflections on the past half century. He spoke feelingly and gratefully of their honored guest and paid him a high tribute, and bade him welcome to the scenes of his former usefulness. In reply the venerable teacher delivered a touching speech, full of pathos, and cherished memories of the olden times when they were boys together. It was such a calling-up of the people and events of the past, of his relations with, and in ors among, the old people of Bellefonte. Brief addresses were also made by Messrs. Edward C. Humes, Governor Curtin, Dr. John P. Gray of Utica, N. Y., Rev. J. P. Hughes, J. W. Gephard, J. P. Hamilton, Rev. W. T. Wylie, General Beaver and A. O. Furst, Esq. The remarks of these gentlemen were pertinent and highly appropriate, the audience listening attentively for the space of three hours or more. Governor Curtin, A. O. Furst, Esq., and General Beaver were particularly happy and impressive in their speeches. We understand that the addresses will be compiled and with a history of Mr. Armstrong's school, will be published in pamphlet form.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

A Man in Ruins.—One of the saddest spectacles in the world is a human being shattered and broken down by the use of ardent spirits. But the damage may be repaired, the ruin restored to perfect soundness, by a course of that most powerful of all invigorants, Dr. Walker's Vinegar Bitters. Beware of those "tonics" of which rum is an element. They aggravate disease and promote decay. 42-4w

Who will draw the great cash prize of $250,000 in the fifth and last grand gift concert of the Public Library of Kentucky, is now the agitating conundrum. Some one will do so with a ticket costing only $50; and the name of the lucky man will be known to all the world on the first day of December next, for the Drawing will certainly take place on the 30th of November. Two and a half million dollars will then be distributed in prizes among twenty thousand ticket-holders. This magnificent scheme is under the managment of Gov. Thos. E. Bramlette, of Louisville; and the same high-toned dealing will characterize this final drawing as was shown in the preceding ones. The Public Library founded by these gift concerts is an honor to the State of Kentucky, whose best men are concerned in seeing that precisely what is promised is performed. Orders for tickets, accompanied with the cash, can be sent to Gov Thos. E. Bramlette, Louisville, Kentucky, or Thomas H. Hays & Co., Eastern agents, 609 Brodway, New York.

Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, for the Cure of Consumption Coughs, and Colds.

The great virtue of this medicine is that it ripens the matter and throws it out of the system, purifies the blood, and thus affects a cure.

Schenck's Sea Weed Tonic, for the Cure of Dispepsia, Indigestion, &c.

The Tonic produce a healthy action of the stomach, creating an appetite, forming chyle, and curing the most obstinate cases of Indigestion.

Schenck's Mandrake Pills, for the Cure of Liver Complaint, &c.

These Pills are alterative, and produces a healthy action of the liver, without the least danger, as they are free from calomel, and yet more efficacious in restoring a healthy action of the liver.

These remedies are a certain cure for Consumption, as the Pulmonic Syrup ripens the matter and purifies the blood. The Mandrake Pills act upon the liver, create a healthy bile, and remove all diseases of the liver, often a cause of consumption. The Sea Weed Tonic gives tone and strength to the stomach, makes a digestion, and enables the organs to form good blood; and thus creates a healthy circulation of healthy blood. The combined action of these medicines, as above explained, will cure every case of Consumption, if taken in time, and the use of the medicines persevered in.

Dr. Schenck is professionally at his principal office, corner Sixth and Arch Sts., Philadelphia, every Monday, where all letters for advice must be addressed 42-4t
